FLOODS SWEEP OHIO; REPORT 2,000 DEAD

DOROTHY EATON ON WITNESS STAND

The most dramatic moment so far in the Grand Jury inquiry at Plymouth into the death by poison of Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton of Assinippi, for which his widow, Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, is jailed on a murder charge, came at 11:10 today when spectators in the corridors of Plymouth County Courthouse saw a court officer lead Miss Dorothy V. Eaton, the lame daughter of the accused woman, into the Grand Jury room.

"DADDY'S" FAVORITE ON WITNESS STAND.

Dorothy Eaton was before the Grand Jury one hour and forty-three minutes. This was the longest time any witness was in the Grand Jury room so far. She came out smiling.

Miss Dorothy, favorite stepdaughter of the dead naval commander, had gone in to tell the grand jurors what she knew of the death of her "daddy," as she called him, and of the events leading up to it.

The girl's brother-in-law, Ralph P. Keyes, had been in the jury room a half-hour, finishing the testimony he began late yesterday afternoon.

Keyes came out at 11 o'clock. There was a ten-minute wait. Spectators assumed that the District Attorney was explaining something to the grand jurors. They waited eagerly to see who would be called into the Grand Jury room next—whether from the men's ante-room or from the one reserved for feminine witnesses.

The spectators, peering along the corridor, saw Deputy Sheriff Earl P. Blake of Brockton step into the women's ante-room and come out with Dorothy Eaton.

The lame girl was walking as quickly as she could. She seemed eager, almost breathless. She has stood staunchly by her mother since the investigation began, but has also denied, in argument with her sister, Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes (June Ainsworth) that the Admiral died by his own hand.

This argument occurred on the opening day of the Grand Jury session.

Cheerful as She Came Out.

When Dorothy came out she was flushed but a cheery smile illuminated her face. She went into the woman's ante room.

Just then Harry Cate of Brant Rock came out of the men's ante room, looked in the women's room and spoke to Dorothy, she came to the door, shook hands and chatted with him pleasantly.

Then Cate went out on the courthouse piazza, where photographers made a rush for him. Cate stood there and the camera men were just focussing when Deputy Sheriff Blake appeared and called Cate back into the anteroom.

About this time (12:40) the Grand Jury adjourned until 2:15 for dinner.

Mrs. Ralph Keyes and Dorothy Eaton, followed by Keyes, walked to the Plymouth Rock House for their meal. They were unescorted. Yesterday they rode, but State Officer Scott and Deputy Sheriff Condon walked all the way beside their carriage.

Assistant Cashier Brewster of the Rockland Trust Company was one of the leading witnesses before the Grand Jury which began its second day's work relative to the alleged murder of Rear Admiral Giles Eaton.

The Admiral had an account at the Rockland Trust Company and Mr. Brewster was very conversant with the Admiral's financial affairs. District Attorney Barker is anxious to learn what became of the pension money which amounted to more than $4,000 a year.

The sisters were waiting to be called. Mrs. Keyes said:

"If the Admiral's death resulted from poison, he did it himself."

Dorothy flashed back: "I know better.

DEMAND GOOD FOR SEASON OPERA SEATS

William F. Richardson, No. 87 Equitable Building, was the lucky first name to be picked out of the box at the Boston Opera House in the drawing for next season's seats held today.

Mr. Richardson, who sat well back in the parquet, immediately rose and signified the seats he would prefer for the coming Winter.

Up went the long stick with an ink swab at the end of it, held by an attendant, and blotted out on the large twelve-foot chart two seats on the first floor, 9 and 10 in row B, for Monday performances.

The drawings continued from 10:30 to 11:30 without intermission and the charts appeared at the close as though they had received a bombardment.

The drawing lacked some of the excitement incident to the same process last season, as many of the selections were made then for three years.

Business manager Macdonald said that the showing for the morning promised well for next year's opera, although he could not definitely state how the drawing compares with last year.

The house is now open to the public, and while many of the best aisle seats have been taken there are yet many good ones to be had by those applying at once.

The Monday and Saturday afternoon performances, as usual, proved the most popular, and Friday evening the least so.

MRS. MALCOLM D. WHITMAN, bride of Brookline tennis star. Mrs. Whitman is in the tornado-swept district near Omaha and her husband is using special agents and the telegraph in a frantic effort to learn her fate.

Whitman Fearful of Bride's Fate in Western Tornado

The family of Mrs. Malcolm D. Whitman, formerly Miss Jessie Crocker, the $10,000,000 California heiress, who with the two children by a former wife of the Brookline tennis star and lawyer, has been journeying westward, is today making every effort to learn if the three are safe following the tornado. The party was expected to reach Omaha shortly before the disaster.

Representatives of Mr. Whitman were hurriedly sent to New York after every avenue of information in Boston had proved powerless to disclose whether the special car in which Mrs. Whitman and the two children rode had entered the danger zone. They were told to use every means to determine through railroad sources in New York whether the train had been stopped before it was too late.

Today Mr. Whitman, at his home in Brookline, had received no word from either Mrs. Whitman or from the representatives in New York.

GOVERNOR FOSS VETOES COURT UNIFORM BILL

Governor Foss today vetoed as "unnecessary" the bill to furnish uniforms to the officers of the District Court at East Boston.

He suggests that the matter be referred to a committee to decide upon the desirability of equipping officers of all District Courts with uniforms.

The bill also provided for an allowance of $100 for each officer for purchasing and for the upkeep of the uniform.

Thrice Stowaway to Reach Boston; to Be Deported

The most persistent stowaway on record arrived at this port today on board the British tramp steamer Lovat. Captain Robert Gregg. The man, who is a half-breed Maltese, named Joseph Mansfield, secured passage on three ships in making the journey to this country, but will be deported when the Lovat sails.

Mansfield, who is twenty-four years old, is the son of an Englis soldier and a Maltese woman. He stowed away on a ship at Malta, hoping to be taken to this country. He was discovered and put ashore at Port Said, but secreted himself on another vessel and got as far as Algiers, where he was put off. Mansfield then managed to get aboard the Lovat at Algiers.

Girl of 18 Tells How She Was Lured to White Slavery

Pretty eighteen-year-old Elizabeth Sokaloski broke into tears in the United States District Court today as she told the pitiful story of how she left her home in Poland to be a governess in New York, but was lured away and to white slavery in Springfield. She was testifying at the trial of Joseph Warner, charged with violating the White Slave Traffic Act.

George E. Cascella of New York, who has been found guilty of taking Miss Sokaloski away is involved in the Warner case. It is charged that Warner entered into a conspiracy with Cascella to bring Miss Sokaloski to Springfield.

Before hearing the Warner case Judge Morton sentenced Salvatore Zucco of Pittsfield, to one year and a day in the Pittsfield jail for violating the White Slave law.

GUARDING HOME OF BRANDEGEE

"You will be killed and your house blown up unless you immediately deliver $5,000 over to us." Such is the text of the latest Black Hand letter received by Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee of Faulkner Farm, Brookline. Three other letters threatening the life of Mrs. Brandegee were sent. This last has so unnerved Mrs. Brandegee that she is on the verge of nervous prostration, and is under the constant care of a physician.

In the hope of improving the health of Mrs. Brandegee, the family will leave on Saturday for Italy. Later they will meet Miss Marion Sprague, Mrs. Brandgee's daughter, who is in Paris, and will return, accompanied by her, early in June.

Because of the inactivity of the Brookline police, Mr. Brandegee has secured the services of the Wood-Morgan Detective Agency, and the Brandegee home is guarded night and day. All the approaches are watched, and nobody but the immediate friends or relatives are allowed to enter the house.

Make Demand for $2,000.

The first letter was received about three months ago. It was addressed to Mrs. Brandegee, and demanded $2,000, under penalty of death. Mr. Brandegee paid no attention to the letter. A week later another was received. This was mailed from Brookline. The text of this letter was like the first. Mrs. Brandegee showed signs of a physical breakdown, and the police were notified. This letter was followed by two more, the last of which threatened to blow up the house.

This last letter said that $5,000 should be left at Chase's express office, to be called for by a man named Joe Carpenter. The Wood-Morgan Agency decided to deliver a package to the express company for Carpenter. Mr. Brandegee notified the Brookline police, and a trap was laid for the "Black Hand."

The police and detectives surrounded the express office on the appointed night. They waited until the office closed, but nobody called. The same plan was carried out the next night, but with the same result.

Just before closing time on the third night the clerk in the office received a telephone call asking if a package had been left for Joe Carpenter. The clerk replied in the affirmative, and the man at the other end said that he would send a messenger over for it.

Chief Denies Notification.

The clerk told the police and detectives. A few minutes later a boy called at the office for the package. It was delivered to him, and he started down Washington street. He walked a short distance, followed by the police, when he stepped into an alley. The officers rushed in just as the boy handed the package over to a man. The officers closed in on the man. There was a struggle. The man broke away, turned in his flight and fired two shots at Sergeant H. Allen Rutherford and Lieutenant George E. Stitt and one of the detectives. Sergeant Rutherford returned the shots, but the man jumped through a back yard and escaped. The only description that the police have is that he was well dressed and wore a dark overcoat.

With the notification sent by Mr. Brandegee to Alonzo W. Corey of the police department, the police would have been prepared; there was a grave blunder, and somebody is responsible, many Brookline people declare.

STEVENS TALKS TONIGHT.

"Some of the Activities of the Commonwealth" will be the subject of the address to be delivered by Elmer A. Stevens, State Treasurer, at the monthly meeting of the Boston Section, Reciprocity Club of America, at the City Club this evening.

DAYTON DELUGED AS LEVEE BURSTS

CINCINNATI, O., MARCH 25.—WIDESPREAD FLOODS ARE WORKING FRIGHTFUL HAVOC THROUGHOUT OHIO.

FORTY-EIGHT HOURS OF CONTINUOUS RAIN, FOLLOWING THE BIG WIND STORM, HAVE FLOODED STREAMS ALL THROUGH THE STATE, CAUSING GREAT LOSS OF LIFE AND IMMENSE DAMAGE TO PROPERTY.

NEARLY 2,000 PERSONS MAY BE DEAD. AN UNCONFIRMED REPORT FROM DAYTON SAID THAT 1,500 LIVES ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN LOST THERE IN THE BREAKING OF THE MIAMI RIVER LEVEE.

The rivers are still rising. Thousands of persons are homeless. The damage, so far as can be estimated now, will be at least $5,000,000.

Scores of persons are missing. Whole districts, including small towns, are isolated or cut off from the outside world. Cold weather is following the rains and bringing great suffering to the homeless flood refugees.

The following message by telephone was received from Dayton after the levee broke:

DAYTON NEARLY ALL UNDER WATER.

The levee broke here today and the waters of the Miami River are flooding the best section of the city. The water was five feet deep in front of the Algonquin Hotel, the Y. M. C. A. building, the Hotel Atlas and other structures at and near the corner of Third and Ludlow streets at 10:30 o'clock, and was rising.

The principal corner at Third and Main streets was three feet under water at that hour and the courthouse was like an island in a sea of mud.

The Mad and Stillwater Rivers are swelling far beyond their banks, and they have hurled their walls of water into the rapidly rising Miami.

The first break in the levee came at 4 o'clock this morning at Stratford avenue. This was followed by other breaks at East Second and Fifth streets. Wolf Creek, flowing into the Miami from the northwest, early got out of its banks and added to the flood. Mad River in the northern section, also got over its banks early.

All of North Dayton except the extreme uplands are inundated. The Miami is more than a mile wide below the city. Four companies of the Third Regiment, Ohio National Guard, spent the night aiding the city officials in rescuing families in the flood-stricken districts. Telephone and railroad service is prostrated in every direction. Ten persons, including Mayor B. B. Lea,

NEW CYCLONE DEMOLISHES ARKANSAS TOWN.

JONESBORO, Ark., March 25.—The town of Weiner was practically demolished by a cyclone that passed over this section today. Two persons were severely hurt.

MEXICAN GARRISON MUTINIES.

MEXICO CITY, March 25.—Two hundred and five carbineers making up the garrison at San Angel mutined today, killing an officer and wounding five privates.

MANY OHIO CITIES SUBMERGED AS RIVERS BURST ALL BARRIERS

are reported to have been drowned by the overflow of the Scioto at Delaware. A work train on the Pennsylvania Railroad went through a bridge at Urbana, which had been weakened by flood, and thirteen of the crew are said to be missing.

Three men were killed at Wellington when a Wheeling & Lake Erie train crashed through a weakened trestle.

The drowning of a child is reported from Zanesville.

At Napoleon the Maumee River rose fourteen feet in twenty-four hours.

The town of Troy is under water and partially destroyed.

The Mad River is out of its banks. It has washed away scores of buildings and bridges. Many trains are stalled and flood bound by weakened trestles and washed out bridges. At Bellefontaine the Mad River is half a mile wide.

Big Damage at Akron.

The city of Akron, on the Little Cuyahoga River and the Ohio Canal, is inundated, and 500 families are homeless. The business section of Akron is threatened. Many families in the town are marooned on the tops of houses. Damage of a million dollars has been done to property.

At Columbus the levee north of State street, near the Broad street bridge over the Scioto River, broke at noon, and the bridge itself went out at 1:15 with a roar. The Governor has ordered three companies of militia to patrol the flooded section on the west side of Columbus. Three men in a boat on the Scioto were drowned, and further loss of life is feared.

Columbus in Great Danger.

The entire city will be in darkness tonight. All water has been shut off by the flooding of the municipal water plant, and a great menace from fire confronts the entire city. The situation is extremely grave and is growing worse every hour.

At 9 o'clock a Western Union operator at Dayton, working with an operator in this city, abruptly cut off a dispatch he was sending and said:

"Good-by! The levee has broken"

Dayton is on low ground, and the levees rise twenty-five feet above the level of the town. Right in the heart of the city the Stillwater and Mad Rivers merge into the Miami, and during the high water the levees are in great danger.

Reports from Springfield say that the Mad River is on a rampage, and scores of families are homeless.

At Zanesville the districts about the edge of the city are flooded. Wesley Klinger, five years old, was drowned.

Trains Crash Through Bridges.

At Bellefontaine a Pennsylvania Railroad express train on the way to Chicago crashed through a bridge, weakened by the Mad River flood. Two trainmen were injured.

Three men were killed today when a Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad train went through a trestle near Wellington. The wreck was caused by heavy rains.

Thousands of persons have been thrown out of work by mills closing, hundreds made homeless, train and trolley traffic has been seriously crippled and damage estimated at millions of dollars done. Reports from all sections of Ohio tell of freshets following the torrential rains which accompanied the great storm.

Five hundred persons were made homeless and many had narrow escapes from drowning when the Ottawa River overflowed its banks near Lima. Eagle Creek, near Findlay, is a raging torrent. Hundreds of families there were made homeless and a number of factories were shut down.

Hundreds at Delaware are penned in their homes, which are submerged. The Scioto has overflowed its banks there and the entire lower portion of the city is under water. It is impossible to rescue many of those trapped in buildings and it is feared the death list will mount very high.

Delaware Appeals for Aid.

Appeals for help have been sent to Columbus. Practically all wires are down, and no trains are operating either into or out of the city, and it is feared that it will be impossible to receive outside assistance for many hours.

What all flood records along every river in Ohio will be broken as a result of the prevailing cloudbursts was the prediction made today by the weather bureau.

HUNDREDS FLEE IN INDIANA AS FLOOD SMASHES LEVEES

INDIANAPOLIS, March 25.—Indiana is in the grip of the worst flood since 1904, which threatens to surpass even the record of that year and of the high waters of 1883. The White, Wabash, Blue, St. Joseph, Maumee, Tippecanoe and Mississinewa Rivers and Sugar and Wild Cat Creeks are way over their banks.

At Marion the breaking of the Mississinewa River levee forced 500 persons to flee from their homes, while at Elwood the Duck Creek levee broke, flooding the homes of 300 persons. In Indianapolis the breaking of the White River levee at Sixty-fourth street flooded many homes.

At Kokomo the State Militia, acting under orders from Governor Ralston, is patrolling the submerged sections in boats to prevent looting and to aid in rescuing persons trapped in their homes.

Hundreds of families have been made homeless throughout Indiana and hundreds of thousands of dollars damage done. Heavy rains, which followed the big storm caused rivers to overflow all over the State. Isolated districts are cut off and it is believed that considerable loss of life will attend the floods.

Latest News from Stricken Storm Zone in Middle West

In Omaha 202 bodies already recovered. Many still missing.

Dead outside Omaha and in other States estimated at 300.

Seven hundred injured in Nebraska and Iowa alone.

Property loss in Omaha, $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Total damage estimated at $17,000,000.

Several persons driven insane by contemplation of havoc.

Floods believed to have drowned hundreds throughout Ohio.

Ten thousand homeless by flood and tornado.

Blizzards add to refugees' distress.

FLOODS AND SNOW IN TORNADO'S WAKE; 10,000 ARE HOMELESS

OMAHA, March 25.—Estimates today of the total death toll taken by the Easter tornado glace it at about 300 in the eight stricken States. In Omaha alone 202 bodies had been recovered at noon, with many still missing. To add to the distress of the afflicted people, floods and blizzards have followed in the wake of the tornado. With the storm still raging three inches of snow covered Omaha before noon today.

Searchers raking three inches of snow from the debris that marks the path of the disastrous tornado that struck this city Sunday night today, dragged forth the bodies of fifty more victims.

Towns Reported Submerged.

Middle West floods and tornado together have made 10,000 persons homeless. The weather in most of the affected States is cold, and the refugees' plight is pathetic. Thousands of acres are under water, and entire valley towns are reported submerged, with their populations camping out in the hills. In Indiana the floods in places surpass the great one of 1883.

A pathetic feature is the number of children who were killed.

500 Injured at Omaha.

Five hundred persons were injured in the environs of Omaha. Seven hundred persons were injured in this State and Iowa. The property loss in these two States alone will be over $11,000,000.

Whether the many missing persons are buried in the ruins or whether they are being cared for by relatives or friends is unknown. They may swell the death toll.

Persons were driven insane by contemplation of the awful havoc. Several cases of this nature were reported to hospitals.

Half a dozen special trains arrived here during the morning bringing a fresh quota of medical men and supplies. They were gladly welcomed. The injured left in the work have not been undressed since Saturday night. They eat at their work. Their rest consists of a few hours' sleep snatched anywhere.

169 Homes Wrecked.

An entire regiment of militia is patrolling the storm-swept region of Omaha, aiding the regulars from Fort Crook in clearing work.

Rescue work will continue among the ruins, as not more than one-fifth of wreckage has been touched. There has been 1,169 homes either entirely destroyed or made useless, according to figures compiled by the relief committee, with loss of $5,000,000. This figure may reach $10,000,000 when damage to railways, public buildings, etc., is known.

One of the most pitiable figures among the searchers last night and today was Mrs. W. W. Sherwood. Ill in bed, Mrs. Sherwood was holding her week-old baby in her arms when the wind descended upon her little household. The home was unroofed, the infant torn from the mother's arms and blown away, and so far it has not been found.

In spite of her weakness and suffering from injuries she herself sustained in the storm, Mrs. Sherwood, aided by her friends, hunted the hospitals and the improvised morgues.

The vast quantities of debris piled up in the streets of Omaha is being cleared away as fast as the toilers can work. It will be at least six weeks before the city is anywhere near normal, and it will be over a year before its rehabilitation nears its end.

Pathetic Scenes at Morgue.

Governor Morehead has received offers of help from all sections of the United States. He says that Omaha and Nebraska will care for their own. A second temporary morgue has been opened. The regular morgue was damaged by the storm.

An armory was pressed into service but it was soon filled with bodies of the dead.

Scenes of pathos beyond the power of description occurred at these charnel houses.

As fast as the bodies were found they were washed and embalmed and if necessary were dressed in new clothing. They were placed in glass topped caskets.

Persons seeking the missing passed through these death chambers. Long lines of mourners stood outside the morgues for hours. Soldiers acted as police and prevented disorder. Physicians were necessary to minister to the faint-hearted ones, many of whom swooned.

As soon as a body was identified it was tagged with the name and address and preparations were made for its removal.

Reports from all the Central West tell of great floods that have followed in the wake of the storm. Thousands of persons have been made homeless and immense property damage has been done.

The Red Cross Society is helping the doctors and nurses. Private homes have been turned into hospitals to help out the overcrowded institutions.

Churches have been turned into restaurants for the benefit of the soldiers and the rescue workers.

Omaha will work out her own salvation. Fifty thousand dollars has already been subscribed for the homeless and needy. One hundred thousand dollars more will come from the State and other sources.

To Rebuild City at Once.

Work of rebuilding the city will be commenced as soon as the wreckage has been cleared away. "Our hearts are bowed down in sorrow, but we intend to show our independence and progress," said Mayor James Dahlman.

Rescue parties worked all night combing the wreckage. Their places were taken after daylight by fresh toilers. Federal and State soldiers patrolled the ruined streets with loaded rifles, ready to shoot down vandals or looters.

Alarm was caused by the federal weather bureau's warning of another storm which is assembling over the Rockies. According to the expert prophecy it will move eastward and may travel, at places, in the same tracks as Sunday's deadly cyclone.

A storm is raging today over Michigan. In the upper peninsula it is a 60-mile blizzard, while lower Michigan is in the grip of a sleet storm. Wires to nearly all State points are down and beyond the fact that there has been great property damage and some loss of life few details can be learned. All streams are swollen, and washouts are numerous.

Schools Destroyed.

Hundreds of dwellings, eight schools and several churches were destroyed, while others were so badly wrecked that their tenants had to abandon them. The better residential section is a mass of ruins, with piles of twisted debris where the streets should be.

The problem of feeding and housing those driven from shelter was the greatest that the Omaha authorities had to face today. A citizens' committee of fifty is in charge of the work. To this committee contributions have been sent and offers of help from those in the city and from outside sources are turned over at once to its members. Already $100,000 has been pledged by the people of Omaha itself, while other offers are pouring in from all sides.

The city council has voted $25,000 relief funds and all newspapers are collecting subscriptions. The State legislature probably will vote a $100,000 relief fund today.

MORGUE IS FULL OF DEAD BODIES AT TERRE HAUTE, IND.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 25.—A cold wave struck Terre Haute today, causing intense suffering among the hundreds made homeless by the Easter tornado. Twenty persons are known dead. Twelve others are missing. Two hundred and fifty were hurt, seven of them fatally. The money damage here is $1,000,000. The streets are still cluttered with wreckage. Rescue work is going at top speed. The City Council has appropriated $10,000 for the storm victims.

One hundred and fifty families are homeless. The morgue is full of dead. Less than half of the victims had been identified at 10 o'clock. Floods are adding to the horror and the damage of the storm zone in this State.

The Greenwood public school, one of the biggest in the city, was destroyed. Seventy-five buildings were caught by the wind and torn to pieces or damaged so badly they will have to be rebuilt.

Scores of homes have been thrown open to the refugees.

15 PERSONS KILLED IN MIAKANDA, ILL.; THREE FEET OF RAIN

ANNA, Ill., March 25.—Fifteen persons were killed in Miakanda, Ill., just north of here, in a cyclone which struck the village last night.

Following the cyclone, rain falling in torrents covered the ground to a depth of three feet, washing away the contents of the cars.

DOCTOR TELLS HOW KID CARTER WAS IDENTIFIED

The graphic story of how William H. McPherson while lying at death's door on the operating table at the City Hospital identified James B. Jennings, known to the boxing world as Young Kid Carter, was related in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court today by Dr. Edmund W. Wilson at the opening of the trial of Jennings for the alleged murder of McPherson in a South End saloon New Year's day.

Dr. Wilson, who was an interne at the hospital, testified that the wounded man had just reached the operating table when Jennings was brought in. McPherson was asked, "Who did it?" The dying man pointed toward Jennings. The young boxer exclaimed, "You are mistaken. I know nothing about it." Then McPherson, too weak from loss of blood to speak further, lightly touched Jennings on the coat sleeve. Counsel for the defence objected to this testimony.

Tells of Shooting.

The second witness today was Gerald J. Leary, a young man who was standing in the Prendergast saloon, corner of Concord and Washington streets, when demolition started the place. Mr. Leary told the story of the alleged shooting from the view point of an eye-witness. He said:

"I saw McPherson push Jennings. Jennings appeared against the bar and fell. As he was getting up I saw him draw a revolver with his right hand. He fired four shots, which seemed to enter McPherson's left side. Jennings was less than 10 feet from McPherson when he fired. McPherson just stood still. Then I turned my eyes towards Jennings and lost track of McPherson.

"Jennings went out and came in the side door of the saloon. He still had the revolver in his hand." He said, "Where is he?"

Before the shooting, while Jennings was down, McPherson kicked Jennings' golf cap toward him, saying: 'Here's your hat!' They seemed to be fooling at first until the shooting.

"Has anybody in the courtroom got a golf cap?" asked District Attorney Pelletier, who wished to have a realistic rehearsal.

Shows How Hat Was Kicked.

The District Attorney took the exhibit, tossed it on the dusty floor and had Leary, the witness, kick it. The hat almost reached the prisoner's cage. Everybody laughed. District Attorney Pelletier muttered something about being willing to "pay for it."

George W. McKenzie, trainman, testified:

"I went into Prendergast's barroom about 1:15 p. m., on New Year's Day. I was talking with one of the proprietors when I saw a man stagger against the bar and fall to the floor in a sitting position. It was Jennings. While he was in this sitting position, McPherson offered Carter or Jennings his cap. He was handing it to him with the left hand when Carter called him a vile name, drew something shiny out of his hip pocket and fired several times.

"I stepped to McPherson and asked him if he was shot. He answered, 'Yes, he got me good.' Four or five shots were fired in rapid succession. McPherson started to run, and then walked out, followed by Carter."

"Seeing he was followed by the man with the gun, McPherson came into the saloon again and Mr. Prendergast, one of the proprietors, led him into the office. Carter came in with the revolver still in his hand, and said something I didn't hear to Leary, who threw both hands up and backed toward the bar.

Pursued Carter.

"Then I followed Carter, who ran through a garage and I didn't see him again until his arrest. I was somewhat afraid of him, but followed him."

McKenzie admitted under cross-examination that Jennings "may have staggered slightly" as he left the saloon.

The accused pugilist is quite a Beau Brummel. Yesterday he wore a new gray suit and a black tie, and today a neatly pressed blue serge and black four-in-hand.

PRINTING PRESSES PUT ON FREE LIST

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Information leaked out of the House Ways and Means Committee today to manufacturers of printing presses that the Democratic tariff revision bill which has been prepared in tentative form has put printing presses on the free list. They are now protected by substantial duties.

MAN SACRIFICES LIFE TO SAVE HIS BABY NIECE

As the result of a sixty-foot fall down an elevator well with his three-year-old neice, who was instantly killed, Chester Balkum, No. 465 Columbus avenue, died at the point of death at the City Hospital today.

Balkum, with the child, Martha Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Coleman, No. 794 Boylston street, in his arms, was going up the elevator at the Hotel Columbus with the baby's mother and another relative. The mother got off at the third floor. The car started to ascend, for some unknown cause. Mr. Balkum, with the baby still in his arms, became excited and tried to get off, thinking he could reach the floor. He had misjudged the distance. As his foot struck the floor he lost his balance, and with the child clasped tightly in his arms he lurched backward into the elevator well and plunged sixty feet to the bottom.

SOCIALISTS WANT FRENCH AND GERMAN ARMIES REDUCED

BREST, France, March 25.—A resolution asking France and Germany to agree to proportional disarmament was adopted by the French National Congress of United Socialists. The resolution declared that the present rivalry of arms is provocative of war, which can be prevented by a treaty to reduce the armies of the powers simultaneously.

The congress adopted a resolution associating itself with the Socialists of Alsace-Lorraine, who have affirmed that they do not want "revenge" which would send France and Germany to war. The congress decided to undertake energetic action in favor of a Franco-German understanding, international arbitration and a national militia, and to oppose three years' army service.

REPUBLICAN MACHINE SNAPS PARTY WHIP TO BEAT VOTES FOR WOMEN

The Republican machine whip was snapped on the floor of the House of Representatives today during the debate on the woman suffrage bill.

Representative Thomas White of Newton Speaker Cushing's right-hand man, and the official mouthpiece of the Republican organization in the House, took the floor early in the debate and stated the position of the party organization. He declared that the Republican party never intended to bind any Republican legislator to vote for the woman suffrage bill by its platform last Fall.

"The Republican party never has and never will attempt to bind any man to any proposition in which he does not believe," he said. "The party platform made no attempt to bind the party, and simply stated that the question should be permitted to go to the people, in order that each member of the party may have an opportunity to ascertain how his constituents feel about it. And in order that the expression of opinion may be as complete as possible, it has been suggested that it be submitted to all of the people, including men and women.

He declared that the "straw vote" bill was what the Republican platform really endorsed. This bill simply proved for a reference of the question in order that an expression of opinion may be gained. The advocates of equal suffrage oppose it on the ground that it would delay equal suffrage and would subject the suffragists to a great expense for a campaign which will not bring any definite results. The proposition before the House today is an amendment to the State Constitution to strike the word "male" from the qualifications of voters. In order to take effect, the amendment must be agreed to by two legislatures and then be approved by the voters on a referendum.

Washburn Scores Party Policy.

Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester, Republican, who followed White, attacked the attitude taken by Republican organization, of which he is a member.

"It is time," he said, "for the Republicans to abandon their policy of blocking progress until they find their position untenable, and then to retreat as gracefully as possible. It is seldom that the dove of peace gets near the Republican party. On this occasion, the party should blaze the way for a change which is urgently demanded.

"The position taken by the party," he said, "is full of inconsistencies. We have permitted women to practice law and medicine. We have admitted their capacity in many other essential directions, yet we refuse to give them the ballot. If the test of franchise is to be brute force, then the anaemic men should be disenfranchised and virile women given the franchise, and if that were done it would be found that the virile women would be in the majority."

The debate opened at 11:30 a. m. and continued until 1 o'clock when recess was taken until 2. At 2 o'clock the debate was resumed. The galleries were jammed with women, eagerly listening to the debate. Advocates of suffrage and "antis" were in the audience.

Representative Greenwood of Everett, Republican, opened the debate for the bill. He called attention to the fact that all parties referred to woman suffrage in their platforms last fall, showing that there is widespread interest in the matter. In view of that fact the Republican party cannot afford to violate its party pledge.

Taxation without representation, he said, has always been looked upon as a tyranny, and it should be regarded as with respect to women. He cited figures to show that large numbers of men voters fail to register their choice at the polls, and said women have been no worse in this respect in proportion to the opportunities that have been given them.

He said women should be allowed to vote because of their record in American history. They have to obey the laws, and they should have a voice in making them, if for no other reason than that they need it for their own protection.

Say Straw Bill is Enough.

Collins of Amesbury took the ground that those who seek to carry out the party pledge will find in the Drury so-called "straw vote" bill an absolutely unequivocal carrying out of the platform pledge. He was somewhat suspicious of the attitude of the suffragists, who while admitting that women be permitted to vote, are unwilling to accept the Drury bill because it permits women to vote on the question of woman suffrage.

Representative Douglass of Boston, Democrat, quoted several letters which he has received from the suffragists threatening him with political extinction, and declared that they have only strengthened his opposition to the proposition. "These letters show," he said, "that instead of purifying politics, the women who are agitating woman suffrage will degrade politics, because they show clearly that these women will stoop to the same methods as the practical politician." He assailed the argument that the resolve will do no harm and declared that men who have traveled in Colorado, a suffrage State, have told him that conditions there have become much worse since women were given the right to vote. He urged the members to vote in accordance with their convictions.

Representative Kinney of Boston cited the fact that there is a strong movement for the abolition of the electoral college, and used this as an argument why Massachusetts should grant woman suffrage. Unless this is done, he said, this Commonwealth will be at a great disadvantage in presidential elections against those States where women are allowed to vote.

The "anti" generals realize that if the bill passes the House there is a strong probability that it will pass the Senate. Only a majority vote will be necessary in that branch. This accounts for the determination on the part of the "anti" forces to down the measure in the lower branch.

Money a-plenty is behind the fighters on both sides. Ten thousand dollars are on hand today for the opening of the contest, and there will be plenty more if that is needed.

Mrs. H. P. White a Leader.

Mrs. Barrett Wendell of No. 358 Marlboro street, wife of Professor Barrett Wendell of the Harvard English department; Mrs. Thomas Allen of No. 396 Commonwealth avenue, wife of the artist and member of Boston's Art Commission, and Mrs George U. Crocker of No. 578 Marlboro street, wife of the head of the famous Crocker family, are acting at the Boston committee of the Massachusetts anti's in the front rank of the fight.

Among other Boston women ready to put time, money and public service into the cause, if needed, are Mrs. Herbert Lyman of No. 20 Marlboro street, daughter of Henry M. Whitney; Miss Eleanor Allen of No. 12 Commonwealth avenue, and Miss Evelyn Sears of No. 85 Mt. Vernon street.

Here is a list of the Boston, Brookline and Cambridge women who make up the Bay State anti-suffrage organization:

CITY COUNCIL FOR SUFFRAGE BILL BY UNANIMOUS VOTE

The Boston City Council is on record as unanimously in favor of the proposed amendment to the Constitution that will allow the voters of the State to pass on the question of woman suffrage. Resolutions in favor of House bill No. 10, which gives this privilege to the voters, were introduced by Councilman James A. Watson, and were passed through in quick style until Watson demanded a roll call. The Councilman backed and filled on this, but finally all voted yea on his passage. Councilmen Kenny and Coulthurst were absent.

The resolutions were sent today to the presidents of the State Senate and the Speaker of the House.

Egg-Rolling on White House Lawn Cost $3,000 Repairs

WASHINGTON, March 25.—"For cleaning and reseeding White House lawn after egg-rolling of Easter Monday—$3000."

This is the bill which Uncle Sam will have to pay as a result of the annual children's party given by the President on the lawn south of the White House yesterday. The damage this year was heavier than in times gone by, because, in the first place, the children were allowed to play on the greasy sward for two hours longer than usual, and, second, the ground being soft, it was very much more disfigured by the thousands of tiny feet which raced up and down its velvet surface until said surface resembled nothing as much as a plowed field.

When President Wilson looked out of his second-story window today he beheld an acre or more of multi-colored egg shells, varied in places by bean- of papers and remnants of lunch which the little ones had not removed. But as the President said: "The kids must have their fun—I wouldn't stop them no matter how much it cost."

MAYOR DEPLORES TRANSIT CHANGES

Mayor Fitzgerald, in a statement in regard to changes in the tracks from Boylston street to St. James avenue and Arlington street, declares: "Under the law the Rapid Transit Commission may order the temporary removal or relocation of any surface tracks in the construction of tunnels, but I do not think that it had the right to make a change as marked as is this without a hearing to the persons affected."

'Many Poets Ought to Swing a Pick' Says Alfred Noyes

ST. LOUIS, March 25.—"There are many poets who ought to be swinging a pick."

Alfred Noyes said so today. Noyes ought to know. He's the best poet since Tennyson. Noyes couldn't be made to mention any name, but declared "that too many of our young poets grow chunks of English and then chop it into pieces with an axe."

Poetry, however, has a great future in this country, in Noyes' opinion.

"The interest the American men now take in poetry indicates an underlying idealism that I was surprised to discover," Noyes said.

NEW DISCOVERY QUICKLY CURES KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After Few Doses Are Taken.

If you are bothered with backache—or rheumatism, disagreeable, annoying bladder or urinary disorders to contend with—or suffer with any other of the many miseries that come from weak kidneys, here is a guaranteed remedy you can depend upon, no matter what else may have failed to cure you.

It is a positive fact that the new discovery, Croxone, promptly overcomes such diseases. It is the most wonderful remedy ever made for ridding the system of uric acid, removing the cause and curing the troubles.

It sinks right in and cleans out the stopped up kidneys and makes them filter and sift out all the poisonous waste matter from the blood. It pacifies and dissolves the uric acid that lodged in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder; and puts the kidneys and urinary organs in a clean, strong, healthy condition.

More than a few doses of Croxone are seldom required to relieve even the obstinate long standing cases, while it cures the most severe forms of kidney, bladder trouble, and rheumatism in a surprisingly short time.

You will find Croxone entirely different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package costs but a trifle at any first class drug store. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time you use it.

WOMAN FIGHTS PATROLMAN TO DIE IN RIVER

Passersby were startled today by seeing a patrolman struggling on the edge of the Charles River dam with a woman who had attempted to throw herself into the water. Prevented from jumping into the water, she fought the officer fiercely.

The woman could not be identified and refused to give her name. It was believed that she lived in the West End, as she was in her stocking feet, and could not have traveled far in this way without being stopped by an officer.

She claimed that trouble with her husband, who, she says, kept nagging her, was the cause of the attempt. She would not tell where she lived, saying she did not wish to go back. The woman is about thirty-five, five feet five inches in height, with brown hair and eyes. She wore a black skirt, striped waist and a brown shawl.

Patrolman Edward C. Verkampen of the Metropolitan Park police took her in charge. She was sent to the Psychopathic hospital for observation.

WILLEY ADMITS MAKING GIFTS TO MRS. ATWOOD

William Lithgow Willey of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company testified on the witness stand today that he had made a number of presents to Mrs. Jennie L. Atwood, whose husband, Horace G. Atwood, is suing him for $20,000 for alienation of affections. Mr. Willey, who is fifty-six years old, said that he gave Mrs. Atwood a desk and a pair of earrings; that in 1911 he gave her two clocks in a parcel, articles of clothing and a ring. He was shown a ring, but was unable to say if it was the one in question.

Mr. Willey was called to the stand yesterday as the first witness for the plaintiff and resumed the stand today. The case is being heard in the Superior Court before Judge Sanderson and a jury. The witness testified that he accompanied Mrs. Atwood to the car from time to time when she left his house to go home. This was after the death of his mother. Willey also admitted that he had been in the company of Mrs. Atwood in the rooms of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company at Faneuil Hall. He testified to calling on Mrs. Atwood at No. 64 Bowdoin street in 1907 and that he saw her once since there. He also called on her when she lived at No. 7 Myrtle street and in 1908 at No. 604 Massachusetts avenue.

Mr. Atwood was not at home at these times, the witness said. He also admitted that he has a brass candlestick presented to him by Mrs. Atwood.

When asked by counsel, "Did he (Atwood) ever call you a 'dirty cur?'" the witness replied heartily: "No man can call me that."

Redfern Corsets
Insure an Attractive Figure

The Spring models were designed to reflect at its best the dress mode of the season. They effect the precise waist-line needed, snug enough to support and to lend a graceful but only slightly curved slope of the hip.

There's comfort in such a corset. One breathes and moves almost unconscious of the corset except through the visible evidences of its figure-improvement.

Redfern Corsets have long been distinguished by the springy quality of their boning; they yield rather than bind; "give" only to return to the lines set by the corset when in repose.

The Corset Makes the Figure

Assuming that your aim is to be corseted for either the fashions of the day or your individual taste in dress—a Redfern is your model—soft, light and pliant—yielding to every demand of the wearer.

The contour of the season's figure gives the effect of the natural waist—which simulates both the Grecian and the Oriental—with long lines and a slightly curved but closely confined hip.

Redfern Corsets Come in Many Models

There is a model for the tall and slight
—for the muscular and plump
—for the willowy maid
—for the athletic girl
—for "Everywoman."

Redfern Corsets, 3.00, 4.00, 5.00, 6.00

We Attach No Time Limit We guarantee, without any to Our Corset Guarantee restrictions, the satisfactory service of every corset we sell—the length of time a corset should wear being left entirely to the wearer's judgment.

DOROTHY EATON BEFORE GRAND JURY AS WITNESS IN CHARGE AGAINST MOTHER

is one not so. He was the best daddy in the world."

Mrs. Keyes smiled and said: "You didn't know him as I did. If you did, you might have a different opinion of him."

Dorothy has been torn with emotion since the grand jury session began and has been seen to weep at times. There has been deep sympathy for the girl, who in physically hampered and whose young life is now shadowed by the tragedy of her step-father's death and the accusation—worse than tragedy—now lodged against her mother.

While Dorothy was telling her story to the grand jurors, her mother, in her cell in the county jail not far away, was busied up by a noticeable cheerfulness. Sheriff Henry Porter and Mrs. Porter, who is matron of the jail, perceived this as soon as they saw Mrs. Eaton today. The accused woman was more confident than ever.

Prisoner in Good Spirits.

"It won't be long before I am out," she said, "I have no doubt of the outcome. I'll be home soon."

Mrs. Eaton was in good spirits when she rose. She ate a hearty breakfast and seemed better than she has since she was jailed.

An increasing coolness between Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes, elder daughter of Mrs. Eaton, and Ralph P. Keyes was noticed by those who came down on the Rockland train.

Another feature of the talk about the courthouse where the Grand Jury was in session was the persistent rumor of a second arrest.

This has been hinted from the first. The District Attorney does not deny this.

Mrs. Keyes and her sister, Dorothy Eaton, left Assinippi at 8:05, went to Rockland, changed cars for Whitman, met Attorney Francis J. Geogan, associate counsel for their mother, then boarded a train for Plymouth. Ralph P. Keyes was on this train, having come down from Boston.

June Just Noticed Husband.

The two girls and the lawyer sat opposite Keyes. Mrs. Keyes took the inner seat, next to the window. Dorothy was on the aisle side, nearest to Keyes.

Mrs. Keyes did not notice Keyes at first. He said: "Good morning, June." The young wife nodded and continued reading the newspaper she had opened.

But Dorothy and Keyes laughed and chatted. They swapped papers and magazines. Mrs. Keyes kept on reading. Occasionally, if a general question arose, Mrs. Keyes would answer briefly.

At Plymouth the girls and Mr. Geogan walked to the courthouse together, Keyes trailing behind. The girls went into the room for women witnesses. Keyes went to the room at the opposite end of the jury-room corridor, reserved for men witnesses. Geogan, of course, did not follow. He had no official position in Grand Jury proceedings beyond his duties as associate counsel for Mrs. Eaton and her family.

Witnesses on Hand Early.

Witnesses began to arrive by 10 o'clock, a half-hour before Grand Jury time. Plymouth "natives" came to the courthouse in greater numbers than yesterday. The corridors were fairly well filled. Interest in the case was growing as the Grand Jury sessions proceeded.

Professor William F. Whitney of Harvard Medical School, who made the chemical analysis of the contents of the Admiral's stomach; Dr. Joseph Frame of Rockland, the Eaton family physician; Medical Examiner Gilman Osgood, who performed the autopsy; Ernest Sparrell, the Norwell undertaker; Harry Cate of Brant Rock, a former friend of the Eaton family, and the Eaton girls were among the first witnesses on hand. None of these testified yesterday. Ralph Keyes was the last witness of the first day.

With Professor Whitney came District Attorney Barker. They went to the District Attorney's office on the second floor, where they were closeted twenty minutes. The grand jurors went in session at 10:30, the deputy on guard took up his station in the jury room corridor and the second day's inquiry was on.

Mrs. Harrison Better.

Mrs. George Harrison, the girls' aged grandmother, was better than she has been since the shock of her daughter's arrest last Thursday afternoon.

It was a question in the minds of Assistant District Attorney Wheeler Mrs. Harrison would be able to go to Plymouth. The general opinion was that her deposition would be taken. That her testimony is regarded as vital by the District Attorney is taken for granted.

MRS. RALPH P. KEYES

(June Ainsworth), who is at Plymouth today where she may be called as witness in Grand Jury proceedings on death of her stepfather by poisoning.

EATON SISTERS AT ODDS OVER ADMIRAL'S DEATH

The two daughters of Mrs. Eaton are at odds about the manner of their stepfather's death, as shown by the following exchange of opinion between Mrs. Ralph P. Keyes (June Ainsworth) and Miss Dorothy Eaton, while waiting to testify:

MRS. KEYES:—"If the Admiral's death resulted from poison, he did it himself."

DOROTHY:—"I know better. It was not so. He was the best daddy in all the world."

MRS. KEYES:—"Well, you didn't know him as I did. If you did, you might have a different opinion of him."

REAL STORY OF HOW EATON FIRST MET MRS. AINSWORTH

The exact circumstances surrounding the coming of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton into the life of Admiral Eaton became known for the first time yesterday. Dispatches from Washington to the AMERICAN stated that Mrs. Eaton, who was then Mrs. Ainsworth, was working for pay as a nurse attached to the George Washington University Hospital at Washington and that she was called in by a physician to attend the Admiral's first wife, who was seriously ill. Before that time Admiral Eaton did not know Mrs. Ainsworth.

Heretofore it has been stated that the then Mrs. Ainsworth was an old friend of the Admiral and his wife and that she came to nurse the first Mrs. Eaton at the request of the Admiral. Dr. F. Fremont Smith, of No. 1806 Massachusetts avenue, Northwest, Washington, who attended the first Mrs. Eaton, declared in Washington yesterday that it was he who secured the then Mrs. Ainsworth as a nurse.

Admiral's Words Recalled.

In looking back at the first meeting of the late Admiral Eaton and the woman who is charged with causing his death the statement made by Admiral Eaton during the controversy over the death of their adopted child is recalled. He said:

"It was not until just before my marriage that I learned that she had a husband. During the time that I paid attention to her, knowing her strained circumstances and thinking that her husband was dead, I helped towards the support of herself and children, giving her money. Later, after the marriage, I learned inadvertently that I had been paying for the divorce proceedings which she had instituted against her husband.

I married her because I had said I would and was too much of a gentleman to withdraw my promise. She has always been a good wife. She is a woman who comes from an excellent family.

In telling of the strange circumstances that brought the Admiral and the second Mrs. Eaton together, Dr. Smith said:

"I had known the Admiral for some years. I was called to his house No. 1405 Twenty-first street, Northwest. His wife had suffered a paralytic stroke on the left side. Her condition was serious. It was necessary to call in a nurse to take care of her. I suggested this to the Admiral, and after consideration he asked me how expensive it would be.

It was evident that the Admiral's financial resources were limited, so I suggested calling in an attendant nurse, who would not cost as much as a graduate nurse. He consented. I got in immediate touch with the George Washington University Hospital, with which I was associated. Miss Mary Struble, now of the Jewish Hospital of Baltimore, was the superintendent of nurses. I told her of my needs. She said she could accommodate me. The next day a Mrs. Ainsworth was referred to me.

She appeared to know her profession so I engaged her. I never once had occasion to find fault with her. She carried out my orders without a hitch. She seemed to be very conscientious and efficient. As I recall it, she was a very well appearing woman, neatly dressed and of pleasant manner.

I never noticed any flirtation between her and the Admiral. The condition of Mrs. Eaton had grown worse so I called in another physician but it was evident little could be done for her. She died February 6, 1906, from cerebral apoplexy, caused by arterial sclerosis. I didn't see much of the Admiral after his wife's death and I was very much surprised to hear later of his marriage to Mrs. Ainsworth.

Worked in Postoffice Department.

The dispatches from Washington yesterday also stated that D. H. Ainsworth, a Chicago book agent, first husband of Mrs. Eaton and father of her two children, appeared in Washington about six years ago, after she had obtained a divorce from him and married the Admiral.

Records at the Third Precinct station in Washington show that Mrs. Eaton swore out a peace warrant against Ainsworth, whom, it was alleged, had bothered her second husband and herself "in a friendly way." At that time the Admiral and his second wife were living at No. 1913 I street, northwest.

Although a native of Alexandria, Va., Mrs. Eaton was appointed from Michigan to a position in the auditor's office of the postoffice department. That was in 1897. She resigned in 1910.

The Washington city directories of 1904, 1905 and 1906 give no record of Mrs. Eaton, either as Mrs. Ainsworth or Miss Harrison, her maiden name. It is possible, the dispatches said, that she lived beyond the district line.

No record of the marriage of Admiral Eaton and the then Mrs. Ainsworth can be found in Washington. The license books for three years following the death of the first Mrs. Eaton have been searched in vain for such a record.

Mrs. Eaton and father of her two children, appeared in Washington about six years ago, after she had obtained a divorce from him and married the Admiral.

RALPH P. KEYES,

husband of June (Ainsworth) Keyes, who was one of the witnesses at the Grand Jury inquiry into the charges against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie May Eaton.

NEW WITNESSES SAY EATON PLANNED BUSY SPRING IN LAST TALK

An important witness, and one who is expected to shed much light on the movements of Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton during the last day he worked upon his farm, has been found by the AMERICAN.

He will be a Grand Jury witness. There is nothing in his story which indicates that anything but the very best of feeling existed between Admiral Eaton and his wife and other members of the household.

This witness, Russell Henry, a farmer living at West Hanover, says he was at the Eaton house during the early part of Wednesday, March 5. It was on this day that Admiral Eaton ate the roast pork dinner that figured so prominently in the famous poison mystery. Mr. Henry says:

I arrived at the Eaton home shortly after 9 o'clock. The Admiral greeted me cordially. I have worked for him more or less for years. I had a load of hay for him, and he helped me stow it in the loft. During the morning, Mrs. Eaton came into the barn and told the Admiral she was going to Boston.

Their parting was the same that would occur between the ordinary couple. They spoke pleasantly, and he remarked that he hoped she would have a good time. It was apparent to me that they were the best of friends. He did not kiss Mrs. Eaton, but perhaps that was due to the fact that he did not care to leave the loft. Later, I saw the roast pork dinner put in the oven. Everything in the house appeared pleasant. I did not hear a word about poison.

Mr. Henry has long been well acquainted with all the members of the family and he said today he never saw or heard anything which caused him to suspect that there was any unpleasantness between the Admiral and Mrs. Eaton.

When Admiral Eaton was in the hay loft with Mr. Henry they chatted as they loaded the hay and talked about future work to be done on the place.

After Mrs. Eaton had gone and the loading of the hay was finished Admiral Eaton went out and took a seat upon the steps and Mr. Henry sat beside him. They chatted for some time, Mr. Eaton outlining a considerable amount of work upon his place which he wished Mr. Henry to do for him.

They planned for work which Henry was to do on the following Saturday and there was nothing in Admiral Eaton's words or conduct to indicate that he was indisposed or melancholy or anticipated anything but a long and peaceful life on his little farm.

Admiral Eaton finally got up and went into the house and when he came out again he had a box of candy and some cookies which he gave to Mr. Henry, telling him to give them to his wife and children. Mr. Henry left the place, saying he would return on Saturday and do the work planned.

It was 2 o'clock when Mr. Henry left the Eaton farm, and it must have been much later when Admiral Eaton ate his dinner. Mrs. George Harrison, mother of Mrs. Eaton, and Dorothy Ainsworth ate dinner with the Admiral.

Admiral Eaton ate very heartily of the roast pig and, after finishing his dinner, he reclined on a couch. Soon after lying down he began to suffer severely from nausea, Henry declares.

During the afternoon Mrs. Ralph Keyes arrived and she is said to have spent an hour with Admiral Eaton, who got up, and chatted with her pleasantly. She left for her home at 4:30 p. m.

After June went away, Admiral Eaton retired, complaining of not feeling well. He was about the place as usual on Thursday and chatted with the family. On Friday he was ill again; he complained continually during the day and suffered again from nausea.

CHROMATIC MILLINERY FOR THIS SPRING

This season we must study Hats from a new angle. The element of COLOR is more important than that of FORM. Heretofore color has been subordinate to form. Small shapes with short, abrupt lines overshadow the large Picture Hats with their sweeping effects.

The new perky, haughty, consequential models give the chance for much play and interchange of different hues, and at first sight create the impression of being veritable works in color.

Every rule of chromatic composition has been violated, with results that are intense, brilliant and beautiful.

Artist-milliners have disregarded all the old accepted theories of gradation, combination, harmony and contrast and massed tints that bear no relation or affinity to one another. Complementary colors are separated by excessively contradictory colors producing warmth and richness instead of coldness and harshness.

"Nothing I have taken for years has given me such a sense of vigor as Sanatogen"

—Olive Schreiner

BEHIND this statement from the gifted authoress is the untold story of a woman who no doubt had tried in vain many a remedy." And she gratefully acknowledges that Sanatogen was the one thing which at last gave her that which was so eagerly sought—new vigor for nerve and brain, and with it all a new sense of physical and mental well-being.

It is this knowledge and certainty of Sanatogen's beneficent action, the grateful realization of its health-giving effects, that has made so many famous men and women publicly voice their testimony. The Rt. Rev. The Bishop of Southampton writes to say that he is glad to bear testimony to the value of Sanatogen as an invigorating tonic and restorative, while the Hon. R. F. Broussard, U. S. Senator-elect from Louisiana, states that from his experience he is convinced that Sanatogen nourishes the nervous system.

All these evidences of Sanatogen's merit find abundant confirmation in scientific circles—in the practices of a multitude of physicians—16,000 of whom have written in praise of Sanatogen. They have proved that Sanatogen does revitalize the nervous system—does impart new strength and vigor—does improve the appetite—digestion—sleep—that it does strengthen the very sources which make for health, strength and long life. And because it has been proved—will it not do the same for you?

If you wish to learn more about Sanatogen before you use it, write for a copy of this booklet, beautifully illustrated and comprising facts and information of the greatest interest.

Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere, in three sizes, from $1.00.

BOYNTON BILL AGAIN LOSES IN STIRRING SCENE

The House of Representatives, by a roll-call vote of 104 yeas to 114 nays, today finally killed the Boynton bicycle railroad bill, after a stirring debate during which Representative Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston charged that "monopoly, with its soldyists at the door of this chamber, is seeking to defeat this measure."

The question was on reconsidering the action of the House yesterday in accepting an adverse report of the Ways and Means Committee on the bill. The measure was rejected yesterday by a margin of two votes. E. Moody Boynton, the aged inventor of the Boynton bicycle railroad, incorporated to run between Boston, Fall River and Quincy, was in the House gallery while the vote was being taken today, his two sons and daughter were with him.

When the vote was announced, showing that the bill had again been defeated, the aged inventor broke down. He was helped out of the chamber by his sons. The bill has been before the Legislature for more than a score of years and has repeatedly met with defeat.

Today's debate on the measure lasted more than an hour. Representatives Dean of Wakefield, Wendell of Bedford, McKittrick of Boston and Giblin of East Boston led the fight in favor of the bill. It was opposed by Representatives Crocker of Ward 11 and White of Newton.

HAIR TURNING GRAY OR FALLING? JUST MIX SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

It's Grandmother's Receipt for Dandruff and Restoring Color to Hair.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, bring back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists have their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can positively tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

MOTHER TELLS OF RESCUE WITH GIRL FROM FIRE

Mrs. Grace Van Alstyne and her eight-year-old daughter, Loretta, of No. 340 Columbus avenue, told today of their experience in being carried three stories down a fire ladder, and then through windows and over roofs to safety. Mrs. Van Alstyne said:

"I was sound asleep with my daughter when I was awakened by a rap on the door. The room was full of smoke. I roused Loretta and rushed for the door, only to find smoke coming up the narrow staircase. It was impossible to breathe in the room, so we went out on a little narrow balcony. Firemen came up and a ladder was raised. Loretta went down alone, with a fireman just below her. I was taken through a window off the balcony and through windows and over roofs somehow, until I reached the ground."

Other lodgers were forced to flee from the flames clad on only in their night clothes, and boarders, in adjoining houses, abandoned their rooms, many of them carrying their trunks with them, giving to the street a half tragical, half ridiculous look in the dim moonlight.

The fire was caused by overheated fat in Pinkins' restaurant. The damage was $8,000.

LORETTA VAN ALSTYNE, eight-year-old girl, who with her mother was taken from third story of burning building to safety.

POPE STILL WEAK; AUDIENCES PUT OFF

ROME, March 25.—Pope Pius X. did not hold audience today because of his weak condition, and no further audiences will be given until April 8. However, the Pontiff bade farewell to Bishop Francesco Ragonesi, the newly appointed papal nuncio to Brazil.

PLAN ARREST FOR SLAYING OF BABY BOY

PASCOAG, R. I., March 25.—An investigation was begun today by State Attorney-General Herbert A. Rice into the murder of Leo Barry, four years old, whose body was found floating in Whipple's mill pond.

Dr. Robert Wilcox, who performed an immediate autopsy, found that the lad's neck was broken and the skull fractured. He pronounced it undoubtedly a case of murder.

The boy disappeared from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Barry, February 28, and nearly a week's fruitless search for his body followed.

A theory of accidental drowning was abandoned, as a result of Medical Examiner Wilcox's report. The police admit that they know who was last seen with young Barry, and say that an arrest may be made in the case today.

That little four-year-old Leo Barry was brutally beaten to death with some dull instrument is the belief of the authorities. The last time any of the lad's family saw the boy he was in a woodshed in the rear of his house, playing with his brother David and another youngster, Francis DeRoy, fourteen. He sat watching while his two companions split an armful of wood. David Barry carried the wood into the house, and says he did not see Leo again.

REPORT ROUT OF MEXICAN REBELS

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., March 25.—An official dispatch from Monterey, Mex., says that between 300 and 400 followers of Venustiano Carranza, rebel Governor of the State of Coahuila, were killed or injured in a battle with federal troops near Saltillo, yesterday. The rebels numbering about 2,000 are reported to be in full retreat toward Monclova with General Lopez and 1,500 men in pursuit.

Dark Horse to Get Ambassadorship to Court of St. James

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Close friends of President Wilson predict that he will appoint as Ambassador to the Court of St. James a man who has not been mentioned publicly for the post.

Men who have been mentioned for the post are Thomas Nelson Page of Virginia, ex-Governor Francis of Missouri, William Church Osborne of New York, and Judge Gray of Delaware.

WOMEN FAINT IN A CROWDED STREET CAR

Because of the crowded condition this morning of a North station bound car from Milton via Dorchester avenue to South Boston, several women fainted near Savin Hill avenue, and the car had to be halted while one of them was carried into a nearby drug store and revived. The passengers were packed in so closely that there was room for no movement whatsoever, and the air was exceedingly foul. It was said there were over 100 people on the car.

Men and women who are compelled to use the line have complained frequently, both to the officials and the Railroad Commission, about conditions. A petition containing a long list of names, was forwarded recently to the proper authorities, asking that more cars be put on during the rush hours.

Wilson Plan for Embassy Homes to Avail Little

WASHINGTON, March 25.—According to a prominent ex-diplomat here today, who refused to allow the use of his name, President Wilson's plan for building embassies and legations to house American diplomats abroad will be of no assistance in bringing the posts within the reach of poor men, unless princely sums are set aside for the upkeep of these establishments. His view was that, providing buildings of suitable character were erected, most ambassadors at European capitals would be in need of from $50,000 to $100,000 a year to maintain them.

Automobiles, suites of servants and other such attendance would have to be provided. The cost of erecting such buildings would be tremendous. A site which has been under consideration for an American embassy in Paris, opposite the tomb of Napoleon, is held at $250,000, and that is considered a bargain price.

FEAR FOR SIGHT OF MISS PANKHURST

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

Sweetens Their Stomachs and Cleans the Liver and Waste-Clogged Bowels Without Griping.

Every mother immediately realizes after giving her child delicious Syrup of Figs that this is the ideal laxative and physic for the children. Nothing else regulates the little one's stomach, liver and 30 feet of tender bowels so promptly, besides, they dearly love its delightful fig taste.

If your child isn't feeling well; refusing nicely eating regularly and acting naturally, it is a sure sign that its little insides need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or your little one has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, tongue coated, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs and in a few hours all the foul, constipated, clogged-up waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness, and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it cannot be harmful.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed—a little given today will save a sick child tomorrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

FIND AMESBURY RECLUSE HANGING DEAD IN HOUSE

AMESBURY, March 25.—Wren Ward Chase, a milkman, made his regular call today at the house of Charles E. Morrill, a well-to-do bachlor, on Rocky Hill Road, he found Morrill's dead body hanging by the neck from the stair banister. Morrill was a boat builder, and had lived the life of a recluse since the death of his father six year ago. He leaves an estate of about $40,000.

Medical Examiner D. D. Murphy pronounced it undoubtedly a case of suicide. Morrill had for some time suffered from acute melancholia.

STORK ARRIVES, THEN COMES REVERE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Neighbors are asking if the stork that visited Mrs. Lewis Fuccullo, No. 738 Broadway, Revere, also brought a box of matches with him.

Ten minutes after the baby was born fire was discovered in the house, menacing the life both of the baby and its mother.

The nurse, Miss Nolan, was busy in the kitchen, when the flames were found. Miss Nolan attempted to extinguish the fire without noise for fear of exciting the mother, but it was soon beyond her control. The fire department, however, made quick work of it.

BRIDE TELLS OF HONEYMOON HIKE TO WIN $5,000

"You can be sure I am going to win that $5,000," today declared Mrs. Hubert G. A. Hassler, who is in Boston with her husband on a five-year honeymoon hike that will take them on a visit to the capital of every State in the Union.

While Mrs Hassler is making this long tramp on a raw meat diet, her husband can eat nothing but vegetables. Both have contracts from the Majestic Athletic Club of Jackson, Miss., providing that if they complete the walk on the diets laid out for them, they will each receive $5,000. Mrs. Hassler said today:

Do I like raw meat? I should say I do. I am good and hungry now and we are on the way to a restaurant where my husband will make his dinner on a bowl of stewed tomatoes while I feast on hashed raw meat.

This is my first attempt at a walking stunt, or, for that matter, at an athletic stunt of any kind, but I have always been fond of chopped raw beef. When the offer was made for this long walk the diet which was to be imposed with it did not present any hardship to me. I find sustaining power in beef prepared this way or in raw liver, and these meats form the principal part of my meals.

I am sixteen years old and was married in New Brunswick, N. J., on February 27. The next day my husband and I began our long walk from the New York City Hall. When my husband proposed, he explained the trip that he had planned. I readily consented to go with him and as soon as our contracts were signed we were married and started.

I have always loved to walk and in my own town I seldom ride on street cars, no matter what the weather. I find that my love for walking is standing me in good stead on this trip. I am not very tired, although we did fifty-one miles from Providence to Boston, which is the longest day's walk we have attempted since we started. We shall not try to walk as far again in a single day. We are a day and a half ahead of our scheduled time now.

"CASCARETS" FOR SICK HEADACHE

Bilious, throbbing headache means bowels are clogged and liver stagnant.

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellowy with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember, that most disorders of the stomach, liver and intestines can be quickly relieved by starting with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

GIRLS FAVORED FOR ADOPTION, SAYS MANNING

Little girls are more in demand by persons seeking a child for adoption than are boys, according to President John P. Manning of the Home for Destitute Catholic Children. Discussing that phase of the work, and adoption in general, Mr. Manning said:

We have more calls for girls than boys, but we actually send out more boys than girls. This may seem contradictory, but the reason is simple. It is because we have more boys in the home than girls, so when the supply of girls gives out, we send boys.

Ideas about dependent children are far different from what they used to be. Nowadays we consider a child's best interests are served if we can place it in a good home until its parents are financially able to take it again into their own home. There are cases, of course, where adoption is the best policy, but in most cases we take children temporarily into the home, or place them temporarily with good families. When the mother recovers her health, or the father gets a good job, we send the children back to their parents. It is the mother love and the father love they need, and money won't buy that sort of thing.

Weight-Lifting Contest in Arrest of 400-Pound Man

The arrest of 400 pounds of man against his will, caused witnesses much joy and two policemen much sorrow in Lynn, when Herbert C. Penney, one of the heaviest men in New England, was asked to ride to the station in the patrol wagon.

Penney didn't want to go, and had the weight of argument on his side. Neither did he want to leave the patrol wagon upon its arrival. The officers will recover from their weight-lifting contest within few days.

TRACE CAREER OF FRANCIS LE MOYNE, "MAN OF MYSTERY"

The Boston police are today investigating the past of Francis LeMoyne, the young man of many accomplishments and elaborate wardrobe, who is charged with the larceny of $15,000 worth of bonds from the branch office of Paine, Webber & Company, at the Copley-Plaza. LeMoyne is at the Charles Street Jail, pending a continuance of his case, which comes up tomorrow.

The police believe LeMoyne is well known in many parts of the world for other things besides his looks, excellent voice, knowledge of languages and extraordinary cigarette case. He is said to be wanted in Red Hook, N. Y., for the alleged larceny of $8,000 by means of a worthless check, but as yet the police have been unable to penetrate the mystery with which the dapper prisoner has clothed his past.

HELEN KELLER TALKS TO 3,000 AS A SOCIALIST

Helen Keller, the wonderful deaf dumb and blind girl, who has learned to talk, delivered her first public lecture in Tremont Temple to 3,000 people.

After the lecture the famous young woman answered questions from the audience, which were repeated to her by Mrs. Macy, her instructor, by the lip reading method. Miss Keller said:

We are all bound together in a love for each other, and the success of our movement and our lives depend on this love for each other. Every one of us has a right to make the most of our lives, of the lives which God has given us.

A ray of light has touched the darkness of my mind. It has brought sunshine into my life. I was blind, now I see; I was deaf, now I hear; I was dumb, now I speak.

The hands of others have wrought this miracle in me, and it has also come through the love of God. Brave and good men and women laid their very hearts in my hands. That is why I find life inspiring. I am a child of the manual power guided by love and imagination. Life should be filled with melody. We are blind to all the pretty ways of children. But the sense alone are not enough. It is only when united with imagination and thought and feeling that the senses acquire full value.

Miss Keller said that she was a real Socialist. She said that "the lazy ones will not get all the cake under Socialism, as they do now."

DANGER OF CONSUMPTION LIES IN NEGLECT

No More Dangerous Than Any Other Diseases if Taken in Time.

People who have Consumption sacrifice their lives needlessly if they give up and take it for granted that nothing can be done for them.

Consumption, in its first incipiency, can be overcome even in its worst stages, and while new lung tissue consists it is evident that it may be protected against the ravages of the Tubercle Bacilli.

One of the leading preparations carrying on this fight is Sirolin, a proprietary medicine in a short time achieved remarkable results in thousands of cases, and is being used by sufferers from Consumption or weak lungs throughout the world. Sirolin is said to be a specific that is back of both of these.

Information about Sirolin can be secured in this country from Hall & Ruckel, 215-221 Greenwich Street, New York City. Riker-Jarnes Drug Stores, all leading druggists are distributing Sirolin with considerable success.

NEWS OF ATTRACTIONS AT THE BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

OTIS SKINNER SCORES HEAVILY WITH 'KISMET'

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Too traveled back to your Arabian Nights with Otis Skinner at the Hollis last evening—and the journey was filled with happy reverie. The colorful, exciting "Kismet" that has given Mr. Skinner an occupation worthy of his talents found its big first night audience in a friendly mood, and the result was a smashing success.

You could hardly have expected less, for "Kismet" moved upon us after perhaps the most triumphant engagement New York has ever seen. But neither Mr. Skinner and his company or the Klaw-Erlanger-Fiske combination of producers asked you to take anything for granted. The performance stood upon its own feet and the verdict was unanimous.

The story of Hajj, the beggar, gave unlimited opportunity for splendid acting and extravagant production. Even the magnificent production, with its bewildering scenes, brilliant colors and exquisite groupings, dropped into second consideration, however, when compared with the masterful performance of Mr. Skinner.

Master of Situations.

The beauty of this actor's reading and his profound sense of value in the important detail of elocution, have always kept him in a class by himself. His art brought him new honors last evening, when he made Hajj the most brilliantly acted character of the year.

Mr. Skinner was obviously the master of every situation. He was sure of himself at every turn of the play—so sure of himself that his audience felt an agreeable sense of security in the performance from the start. It has been a good many years since the stage has given us an equally perfect specimen of character making.

Even the bloodthirsty, lying and altogether worthless Hajj was a man to be loved under Mr. Skinner's skilled handling. You could hardly agree with his acts or his motives, but he earned your theatrical respect.

As a picture in beautiful colors and alluring atmosphere, "Kismet" will doubtless hold its own for some time to come. It is a tonic for both the eye and the mind, and a faultless opening performance started it on what should become a prosperous visit. It was impossible not to feel the stirring drama that runs through its three acts, or to miss the enjoyment of its romance. "Kismet" was dramatic entertainment at its best.

Given Good Support.

Sharing special privileges of the performance with Mr. Skinner were George Gaul, whose deep villainy was plainly from the story book; Owen Meech, whose aged Juwan made a pleasant impression; Fred Eric, who upheld the romantic side of the play; Rita Olivet, who struggled persistently with her emotions, and Eleanor Gordon, who appeared to be in trouble most of the time. These and a score of others labored intelligently.

If you haven't forgotten our Arabian Nights you will enjoy "Kismet"—if you have, why, you will enjoy it just as much.

It is a play to be seen at any cost.

NATIONAL THEATRE PRESENTS BILL OF MANY NOVELTIES

"Honor Among Thieves" is the headline feature at the National Theatre. The plot of the Craven-Welsh sketch is built along plausible lines and is interpreted by a clever cast.

An act that mystifies and is a decided novelty is given by Lorn, the girl in the parrot. "The Two Drummers," by Jones and Sylvester, is a rich bundle of nonsense. Helene Bell and the Quinn boys sang and danced themselves into favor with "Framing an Act," and LaVier, with his dumbbells doing aloft, won applause. The DeMont trio presented "Hotel Turnover," in which humorous dialogue and acrobatic work was deftly mixed. Barto and Clark are clever singers and dancers, and their skit, "In Room 65," is a petite musical comedy. The Edison talking picture subjects were interesting. The first, "Dick, the Highwayman," is an English story of the days when knights of the road were to be met at every turn. The second, "The Politician," is a modern comedy built upon the desire of a typical ward heeler to run a friend for office.

St. James Theatre.

The headline attraction in the new program at the St. James Theatre yesterday was supplied by Willard Hutchinson and his company, who appeared in a tabloid farce called "A Leap Year Leap." There were other vaudeville novelties and motion pictures.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Girl of Many Husbands" is an elaborately produced and lavishly gowned burlesque entertainment—at least, that is the way it looked from the front seats at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday, when Harry Hastings' new show began its week of revelry in this city. As you might imagine, "The Girl of Many Husbands" had its full share of lively complications, all of which were turned into rollicking fun. Besides the usual activities by comedians, there were three or so likely young women in the company. As a matter of fact, the show was largely music and girls.

Globe Theatre.

The program for the current week at the Globe is full of comedy and novelty. The Great Ergotti and his Lilliputians are playing a return engagement, and their excellent acrobatic act is worthy of attention. Other features of yesterday's new bill were the Minstrel Four, a quartette of clever singers, dancers and comedians; the Four Musical Cates, in an instrumental act far above the ordinary, the saxophone playing by one of the members being especially worthy of mention; Melrose and Kennedy, in funny acrobatic stunts, their fails being hazardous and exciting; the Willis Twins, a pair of young women who work well; Wixon and Conley, Zimmer, the McCarvers and Marie King Scott. The Pathe Weekly and a two-reel war story, "The Confederate Spy," were especially interesting in the picture section of the program. The pictures will be changed, as usual, on Thursday.

NEW SAVAGE PRODUCTION AT THE TREMONT

"Top o' the Morain'," the latest of the Henry W. Savage productions, began its local career auspiciously at the Tremont Theatre last night. In "Top o' the Morain'" Anne Caldwell has written a melodramatic comedy in which thrills are skilfully introduced as the punctuation marks of a straightly humorous story, and both the thrills and the comedy scored heavily.

The scenes are laid in an American city to which a young Irish girl comes to make her home with her father and stepmother. Her affection for her stepbrother—a lovable but weak youngster, whose opportunities as a bank employe are taken advantage of in a way that promises to lead him into serious trouble, involve the girl in difficulties which she accepts without a murmur—risking her own happiness that her cause may not have to pay the natural penalty for his indiscretion.

Eventually, at a picnic given under the auspices of Father Quinn, a highly attractive priest, who considers every member of his parish in the light of a child, the tangle is straightened out and the girl and the boy find themselves facing a happy future.

Tim Murphy has the part of the priest and nothing that Mr. Murphy has done in his extended career has been better done or has made a more emphatic impression on his audience than this characterization. Gertrude Quinlan, known to every Boston theatregoer by reason of her early connection with the Castle Square Opera company, her success in the part of the landlady's daughter in "The College Widow" and for her numerous other triumphs of characterization, made of "Jerry" O'Donnell, the girl, a personality which carried the admiration and sympathy of the audience. Every other one of the more than twenty characters was in the hands of a highly capable actor.

Next Week's Bills.

Emma Trentini, in "The Firefly," a new comic opera, will be the attraction at the Shubert Theatre, beginning next Monday.

Douglas Fairbanks, in "Hawthorne, U. S. A.," will move into the Colonial next Monday.

"The Life of St. Patrick," in moving pictures, will be a special attraction at the Majestic Theatre next Sunday evening. Peter B. McNally will be the lecturer.

Lillian Russell will come to Symphony Hall April 1, 2 and 3 to lecture on "How to Live 100 Years and Die Young."

$50,000 IN HOUR SKETCH HIT ON BILL AT KEITH'S

Every business man and pretty stenographer will want to see how Robert Hornblower makes $50,000 in an hour and wins a bride, which is the star attraction at Keith's this week. The money is made and the bride is won, by Henry Woodruff in the clever business skit, "A Regular Business Man." It is a live take-off on modern business and the way Hornblower, the lawyer, gets that $50,000 is full of good, rich laughs. His stenographer and bride in Miss Margaret Lotus, a charming girl and a clever actress.

Coupled with the talking motion pictures, the screamingly funny skit of W. C. Fields, the silent humorist, and "Winks," the diving seal, the entire bill this week is filled with unusually fine material. The talking pictures introduced two entirely new plays, "Dick, the Highwayman," and "The Politician." They are intensely interesting motion pictures and the enunciation of the kinetophone, Thomas A. Edison's latest invention, is remarkable. Those who have witnessed the motion pictures from week to week see a steady advance in this epoch-making invention.

Percy Wenrich, author of popular songs, and Miss Daily Dunn (Connolly gave an entertaining sketch Mr. Wenrich plays his own compositions while Miss Connolly sings. Miss Ethel Kirk, late star of "The Hawthreakers," and Billy Fogarty gave a melange of patter and song that was good and James Leonard & Co., in "When Ham Lets Her," was a clever burlesque on Shakespeare's play. John Dooley and Billy Parker are good comedians, and Morgan, Dailey and Morgan proved lively entertainers. The Pathe weekly ended an unusually fine bill.

Phonograph Recital.

The new Edison disc phonograph was given a public demonstration yesterday at the headquarters of the P. H. Thomas Company, No. 30 Exeter street. This new machine, upon which Mr. Edison has been working for three years, will now take its place in the market with other disc phonographs. The demonstrations yesterday, which were really interesting recitals of the best vocal and instrumental selections, gave ample proof that the new machine is an instrument of rare perfection. Its reproduction of tones, both of the voice and of separate instrumental instruments, was of such rare quality that the phonograph is certain to become an important addition to the talking machine family.

Maclyn Arbuckle Returns to Boston in 'The Round Up'

Maclyn Arbuckle, back in his old part of Slim Hoover, sheriff of Final County, Arizona, in Klaw & Erlanger's big production of "The Round Up," showed last night at the Boston Theatre, that he is as quick as ever on the draw. Then he did his old stunts of playing the piano with one finger, rolling a cigarette with one hand, said "nobody loves a fat man anyhow," and incidentally furnished much amusement and enjoyment for an audience that filled the big theatre.

But beyond the spectacular it has a heart interest story. Two, in fact, for the affair of the sheriff must be counted also. And it's a very serious affair with him, all leading up to the little sentence near the end of the last act which gets him the big laugh of the piece.

Mr. Arbuckle has a fine supporting company. The work of Ogden Crane, as Buck McKee, is particularly good. Others in the cast are Robert Vaughn, Harry Cowan, Gus Christie, Elmer Grandin, William Conklin, Grace Benham and Ethel von Waldron. "The Round-Up" will remain the attraction at the Boston Theatre for several weeks.

Orpheum Theatre.

Walter H. Browne and company, in "His Father's Son," were featured in the new program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. Other vaudeville acts and new motion pictures completed the bill.

Howard Athenaeum.

Luther McCarty, the new heavyweight pugilist, was featured at the Old Howard yesterday. He helped keep the daily crowds interested. The burlesque attraction was "The Whirl of Mirth."

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The feature of the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday was La Petite Ouri, a pretty bicyclist from Europe. The entire bill was new.

Waldron's Casino.

At Rice's "Jolly Follies" moved into the Casino Theatre yesterday for a week's visit. There were both girls and comedians. Isn't that enough?

Grand Opera House.

"Miss New York, Jr.," a spirited burlesque show, began a week at the Grand Opera House yesterday. There will be wrestling Thursday night.

IRISH PLAYERS PRESENT PLAY AND COMEDY

The Irish Players, who made many friends in Boston last season, returned to the Plymouth Theatre last evening and were welcomed by an appreciative audience. "Mixed Marriage," a play in four acts by St. John G. Ervine, and "Gaiety Girls," a comedy in one act by Lady Gregory, were presented by the players last evening and will be repeated this evening. These are the first of a large repertory of plays to be given during the engagement in Boston. Many of the plays have not before been acted in this city.

The company is still directed by Lady Gregory and the personnel of the organization is practically the same as last year. It includes Sara Allgood, Cathleen Nesbitt, Una O'Connor, Nora Clancy, Eithna Magee, Eileen O'Doherty, Arthur Sinclair, Fred O'Donovan, J. M. Kerrigan, Sidney J. Morgan, J. A. O'Rourke and U. Wright.

"Mixed Marriage," like the other plays, is uniquely interesting, and for unaffected realism the acting is remarkable. The plot deals with an Orangeman who professes ardent bigotry, but when the test comes in his own home and his oldest son declares he is in love and will marry a Catholic girl he cannot stand the test and refuses to use his influence in stopping a strike riot which is imminent because of the feeling which has developed between Protestants and Catholics in the ranks of the working men. The story ends unhappily when the son's sweetheart rushes out into the crowds to stop the feeling, feeling that it is she who has caused the whole trouble. She is killed by a rifle bullet.

"Galway Races" is a pretty little comedy of love. The conversation between the three players in the piece being interspersed with snatches of old Irish songs.

Plays That Remain.

"Ready Money" continues at the Shubert, where it will remain this week. Next Monday the piece will move to the Majestic for a week's stay.

"The Pink Lady" is now on its final week at the Colonial Theatre.

"Officer 666" is attracting large business to the Park Theatre.

"The Man With Three Wives" will remain at the Majestic this week. It is a lively operetta.

The two final weeks of "Believe Me, Xantippe" will be occupied at the Castle Square.

The kinematector pictures of the Panama Canal and the Balkan war continue at Tremont Temple.

Tonight when sitting around just think how much more cheerful home would be if you had a Victor-Victrola.

J. P. MORGAN'S ILLNESS CAUSES NEW ANXIETY

ROME, March 25.—The illness of J. Pierpont Morgan, the American money king, is again causing anxiety. In spite of denials the report persists that the ailment from which Mr. Morgan is suffering has extended to his brain, and that his former mental elasticity is gone.

Mr. Morgan is said to have spent a great deal of his time in sleep and that when awake he seldom speaks. It is stated by members of the Morgan party that the reports of Mr. Morgan's mental illness have been started for stock market purposes.

"Mr. Morgan will carry out the program he has followed for twenty-five years," said Herbert L. Satterlee, son-in-law of the financier. "He will go to Aix les Bains the middle of next month, going from there to Paris. He will be back in New York before the Fall. He is making satisfactory progress toward complete recovery. Examination has shown all his vital organs normal."

MRS. CRARLES AUSTIN BATES, who agrees with Wellesley College girls that they should marry only men who have $5,000 or more as a yearly income.

'MIND MEASLES' SAYS WOMAN OF WELLESLEY CLUB

NEW YORK, March 25.—That Wellesley College girls have formed a club, the purpose of which is to postpone matrimony until three years after graduation, and that marriage of a Wellesley girl must be only to a man whose yearly income is $5,000 or more, has caused considerable comment among college women in this city.

As the Wellesley Club hopes to be instrumental in forming similar organizations in all large colleges for women, the question is of more than ordinary interest. "On first thought it seems more or less of a joke," said Miss Amy Fail Hicks, president of the Women's Henry George League. "No sane, normal-minded woman, spiritually well poised, could deliberately arrange her life after such a regulation as is suggested by this club. It is absurd, and demonstrates the ineffectiveness of modern college education for women. I think, however, this is only a transitional period, and they will get over it, just as children get over epidemics of measles. In fact, it is mental measles," added Miss Hicks.

Mrs. Charles Austin Bates, president of the College Women's Club, believes there is more or less sense in the preparation, although she thinks the girls are wrong in postponing marriage until three years after graduation.

"I believe nature must be taken into consideration in these matters," said Mrs. Bates, "and it is according to nature that women marry and have their children as early as possible after genuine maturity. Earlier marriages are better for the race, I believe, and posterity should be the first claim on a college woman's talents and mentality. As to the money restriction, I do not know but it is a wise thing, for a girl of education and culture cannot live in the proper environment on less in these days of the high cost of living."

Mrs. Ernest Bunsi, president of the Graduate Club of the Normal College, thinks it is wiser to marry at twenty-five than at twenty, but she thinks it absurd to expect to marry in every instance men with incomes above $5,000. "Many good, honest, upright, cultured men would be without the pale if the $5,000 income restriction is to be adhered to," added Mrs. Bunsi.

BELIEVE GIRL SUSPECT TO BE GRETA CHAPMAN

May Brown, an unusually handsome girl of twenty-two, who is being held by the New York police, charged with shoplifting is believed to be Greta Chapman, who formerly lived with the family of J. D. Dwyer at 228 Spring street, Medford.

Greta Chapman disappeared last August. She was sitting with the family on the front piazza, when suddenly she arose, walked away without a word, and was not seen by them again.

The girl, giving the name of May Brown, was arrested just after leaving a department store with three corset covers and a silver mesh bag concealed under her coat. Sobbing, she told the police she was the stepdaughter of Lawyer Richard Dwyer of Boston.

Attorney Dwyer said today: "I have no doubt that the girl is Greta Chapman, who my brother, J. D. Dwyer, took to assist his wife in the housework. Greta, at the time we took her, was living with her aunt, Mrs. J. Potter, wife of a St. John, N. F., wealthy lumber dealer."

After her arrest, the girl told her story as follows: "I was not contented at home. I did not get along well with my stepfather, and last Friday I ran away and came to New York, where I have since been living. I believed when I came here I could easily get work.

"I have found out that it is not easy for a strange girl to find work in a great city. Then I decided to go back home at any cost.

"I thought I would steal just enough from some department store to pay my fare back home."

OWED WIFE MILLION WHEN SHE DIED

NEW YORK, March 25.—Marcy Carroll Brown, a stock broker of this city, who married Miss Margaret Daly, eldest daughter of Marcus Daly, the Montana copper magnate, on January 2, 1901, was $1,200,000 in her debt when she died on April 29, 1911. This was disclosed in the surrogate's court, when a decision was returned on an application made by Mr. Brown for an allowance of $18,000 a year from his wife's estate for the support of his children. In his application Mr. Brown told the surrogate that he was unable to support his daughters. The surrogate fixed $3,000 a year as the allowance for each child.

DR. ROWLEY AGAIN CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Dr. Francis H. Rowley was re-elected president at the annual meetings of the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the American Humane Education Society. Two new agents, William H. Irwin of Barnstable and Charles H. Reynolds or New Bedford, have been added to the prosecuting staff. Steady progress toward the building of the Angell Animals' Hospital was reported. The site has been secured and paid for, and about $80,000 is in sight toward the construction.

MISS WILSON SENDS HANDKERCHIEF GIFT

A handkerchief embroidered by the hands of President Wilson's daughter, Eleanor, and a gold leaf card representing the good wishes of Helen Taft, will be among the prized souvenirs of one of the tables of the white and dancing party in All Souls' Hall, Columbus avenue. A handsome pocketbook has also been given by Mayor Fitzgerald.

LOWELL WOMAN TRIES SUICIDE

LOWELL, March 25.—While under the influence of religious hysteria, Mrs. Anna Lawson, aged seventy-six, today cut her throat at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Anderson, No. 20 Clifford street. The woman was taken to the Lowell Corporation Hospital, where it was said that she will die.

JAIL FILIPINO FOR WAR PLAN THEFT

MANILA, March 25.—Gansico, the Filipino who was recently arrested on a charge of stealing military plans of the Corregidor fortifications, was found guilty today and sentenced to serve nine months in prison. It develops that two blue prints of the Corregidor defences had already been sent to Japan through agents before Gansico's arrest.

'MARTHA' SUNG IN ENGLISH AT OPERA HOUSE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"Martha" in English was the bill at the opera last night. The audience was gigantic. All seats not held by subscribers had been sold long ago to the Knights of Columbus, who wanted to hear John MacCormack, and when John was scratched, gamely retained their places.

As a performance it was a pretty good show. The rollicking old melodies hadn't been heard in the Boston Opera House since the time, four years ago, that the Metropolitan Company sang "Martha" in Italian with Bonci, De Pasquali, Homer and Didur. The company evidently enjoyed the music, considered it a picnic. The audience applauded loud and long.

Alice Nielsen sang "The Last Rose of Summer" with a lingering sweetness that was as lovely as the rose itself. The other big numbers were much appreciated. Everybody had a good time.

But, with a capital B, it is my duty as a critic to consider this performance in its bearing to the sacred cause of opera in English, and I can't approach it with a straight face. For it wasn't opera in English at all. It was opera in dialect.

The tenor was a German, Max Lipmann by name. He had an accent like Louis Mann and didn't look unlike him. The baritone was an Italian, pelegped Fornari, and Ben Welch must have studied him for his popular Italian imitation. The contralto was a Spaniard named Mario Gay, who brought the soft enunciation of Iberia to her task. The bass was a Russian-American, Lankow, and give him his due, his English was excellent. That left little Alice Nielsen to represent the U. S. A.

Enjoyed by Audience.

All those people meant well. They did the best they knew how. They deserve honor for their noble efforts. But if you were in the audience last night and couldn't understand anything, blame not the tongue of Shakespeare and Elinor Glyn.

The good old Italian male chorus sang Italian all the way, and the American female chorus occasionally forgot the words and sang "la, la."

What did this performance in English show? It demonstrated very thoroughly that when English is sung by such people as Nielsen and Lankow it can be understood, and when it is sung by foreigners who have not been sufficiently coached, it cannot be understood.

We do not expect to get what the chorus sings or the words of the quartets or the duets, except here and there, but it helps a lot to comprehend the jokes in the recitatives and the sentiments of the solos.

The production showed the results of frequent rehearsals, and I understand that a sincere effort was made to improve the diction of the artists who participated.

Despite the polyglot character of the evening I think that the audience liked "Martha" better than if it had been sung entirely and artistically in Italian.

Alice Nielsen in the title role had a chance to wear three or four very pretty costumes. She looked very girlish and sweet. She was still suffering from a bad cold, but her voice was clear and crystalline with that buoyancy that comes from absolute confidence of pitch. Her diction was admirable, proving what is possible and will some day be necessary.

Maria Gay Excellent.

Max Lipmann, the tenor, was the fourth choice for the part, the others being Zenatello, MacCormack and Sacchetti. To give him his due he seemed to have a pleasant lyric tenor with little breath, and rather rabbity high tones. Dramatically he was not present, but he sang his big solo fairly well and was dependable in the concerted numbers.

Maria Gay sang excellently and displayed considerable appreciation of the comedy side of the part.

Lankow found most of his music rather high for him, but labored through successfully. His idea of being debonair was to swing his right arm in front of him like a pendulum. Fornari didn't seem to like his job. Oshansky's English at the clerk's was complete gibberish. Monuzzoni conducted. The chorus and orchestra ace-ed several times, but upon the whole the work was creditable. The settings seemed to be a job lot, but looked well enough.

New Theory by Which All Disease Can Be Treated at One Time

The Body That Lives Close to Nature Knows Nothing of Disease—Therefore It Is Claimed That the Logical Relief For Any Ailment Is to Feed the Nerves with the Vital Elements of Nature—This Can Be Done with Tona Vita, a Tonic Like Condensed Sunshine.

Nervous debility is a weakness of the nervous system brought about by overtaxation. It causes the various organs to get out of harmony with the brain.

A peculiar symptom of this disease is that the subjects to it invariably imagine they are suffering from some organic disease. They will magnify the smallest troubles into acute ailments, become "blue" and have no confidence in themselves; or they may worry at the smallest misfortunes and find sleep at night broken and restless. Finally, when they have cultivated some disease by the aid of their imagination, they will become speedy preys to it.

Tona Vita is the logical relief from this insidious disease. Its action on the nerves is like that of rain on parched flowers.

The average man or woman should be able to live out the allotted three score years and ten; provided their nervous systems are healthy. There are years of life contained in every bottle of Tona Vita.

A few symptoms of nervous debility are:—sense of fulness after eating; being perpetually tired or a general feeling of being run down.

BUYERS MAKING FINAL CHOICE AT TRUCK EXHIBIT

By J. C. KERRISON.

This, the second last day of the motor truck show opened up with a bang and a rush that passages that took before the doors of the exposition hall were opened. The attendance in the early morning hours was as usual confined to those people who are interested in trucks from a purely personal standpoint and who have reached that state of mind where they have decided to invest a certain amount of cash in a motor truck.

With them it is a question of deciding but one or two more points and it can be determined only by a consultation with the motor truck experts who are in attendance at the show in goodly numbers.

The number of demonstrating vehicles seems to have greatly increased this week over that of last and one now sees heavy loads of merchandise traversing the streets in the vicinity of the building. These are closely watched by prospective truck owners, who are keen to realise all the data possible.

The attendance last night was not up to what it has been in the past, but still it was a lively crowd and everyone seemed to have some real business at the show.

Exhibit of Sundries.

The trucks with dumping bodies in action were all patronized to a considerable degree, they seeming to hold the attention of the crowd when other things failed.

From the truck stand unit there is nothing lacking in the exhibit, as it is complete in every particular from the light delivery wagon up to the ponderous five and six ton truck. They all have their particular good points and they all appeal to the visitor for this, that or the other reason and they all make a good showing.

Outside of the trucks, however, there is an interesting exhibit of sundries and accessories. In the accessory line the tire manufacturers should not be overlooked. This branch is one of the most important of the industry. Here solid tires of various kinds are displayed, making a striking contrast to the pneumatic tires exhibited during the pleasure vehicle show. There are tires without number of various sizes and styles and all are provided with the idea of giving the best service and mileage.

Aside from the tires there are not external devices of various kinds and sizes, comprising the control, compressed air and gas. They mean little to the public simply a repetition of the displays shown during the pleasure car show.

The factory representatives are still on the ground and will remain here until the close of the show to-morrow night. Every one of the salesmen the belief that this is the greatest truck show that has been held in the country. It is certain it surpasses factory-wise all Chicago and New York and in volume of business transacted will undoubtedly go ahead these two displays.

Line of Prospects.

The Chicago truck exhibit was not by any means a successful one from a sales standpoint, while the Boston show is quite different. There were comparatively few people in attendance, but of the few that came were good. They are buyers or prospective buyers. For instance, one firm is known to have sold no less than twenty-four light delivery wagons during the show, while another has sold eight two-ton trucks and another well known company has sold four five-ton trucks. Every one has a line of prospects that they will develop immediately following the close of the show.

WHAT TO SEEK IN A MOTOR TRUCK

The elements to be sought in a motor truck, according to the White Company, are economy of gasoline and oil consumption; economical tire wear; satisfactory service with least attention, and ample replacement of wearing parts, ease of operation; simplicity and accessibility for the purposes of inspection, adjustment and complete understanding of the mechanism; ample service facilities; a strong manufacturer back of the truck and a reputation for business integrity

Lauther-Juergens Men Report Good Sales at Exhibit

The Myers-Adams Company, New England distributors of the Lauther-Juergens truck, has had a most successful week at the show, having already disposed of eight two-ton trucks. In speaking of the business transacted by his firm this week, Manager L. H. Hadlock said:

"It has been an excellent show for us. We have sold more than we anticipated. We have sold eight trucks, and when I say sold I mean passed good checks. In addition to this we have secured a list of prospects that give evidence of some actual business.

"One of the sales we are very proud of is that of a two-ton truck to the mining firm of Ellis & Hussey. It is the chassis shown in operation and immediately upon the close of the show it will be shipped to Johannesburg, South Africa. I believe, in the first-mentioned that any of the trucks on exhibition will be shipped."

H. S. Fuller of the Lauther-Juergens and Dove Abrams have been in town and interviewed, and both of them are satisfied the Boston show is the best show held so far this year.

Goodyear Truck Tire Sales Are Big at the Show

"During the last week the sales of Goodyear Truck Tires have exceeded my expectations by far," says C. W. Martin, Jr., manager of the motor truck tire department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, O., who is here in charge of the goodyear activities of the Boston Commercial Car Show.

"A large share of our success, I believe, is due to the fact that there are, in the Goodyear line six tires for every possible truck service, which allows users to select the type of tire best adapted to their particular truck. Truck salesmen are similar to tire doctors inasmuch as they diagnose the case of every truck and subject the remedy in giving him the type of tire which is bound to give the utmost in service."

Kelly Has One-Ton Trucks with Long Wheelbase

The new Kelly one-ton truck, with long wheel base and dual rear wheels created a decided sensation at the opening of the Motor Truck show in Mechanics Building. This truck is proudly the largest truck built at one ton rating. It carries a 144-inch wheel base and a long loading space behind the drivers seat. This coupled with the dual rear wheels creates the look and the fact that the capacity of more of the one and one-half tons capacity of more.

The Kelly Springfield Motor Truck Company is now showing a one-ton chassis with a shorter wheel base and the new five-ton model. This is the first time that the entire new Kelly line has been shown in Boston. That these new models have been favorably received is putting it mildly.

DAIRY MEN FIND THEY SAVE MONEY BY USING TRUCKS

There is a diversity among dairy men in the method of most efficiency adapting the motor truck to their business. Among the applications which dairy men have decided on are: Delivering the milk from the dairy to the railroad, transporting direct to a distributing station in the city or to wholesale or retail customers; distributing milk from the railroad direct to wholesale and retail customers or to a distributing station. In nearly every instance motor trucks when applied to these types of service have proven successful.

W. A. Hodgett, manager of the South Lincoln Dairy Company, who operates a two-ton Acco truck, describes the benefits derived from the motor truck in the dairy business by the system they employ as follows:

"Formerly in our business we used thirteen horses continually and leased a stable in Cambridge. We now board four horses in stables near customers and deliver from the farm directly to the wagon by means of the Acco, thus cutting the expense of nine horses. We use the truck for a two-ton load morning and night with one chauffeur, doing about sixty miles a day, Sundays included.

EXPRESS FIRMS REPLACE HORSES WITH MOTOR TRUCK

Peerless trucks have been rapidly introduced into the delivery service of the express companies. One of the first Peerless trucks was sold to the American Express company.

This was operated under test conditions and closely observed by the traffic department of the corporation. Other purchases of from three to a dozen trucks followed at short intervals until now the company operates more than forty Peerless three, four and five-ton trucks in widely separated parts of the country.

The United States Express Company has successfully employed a number of Peerless trucks, and the Wells Fargo Company, which recently began the purchase of motor equipment bought five Peerless trucks of the three-ton size. The express companies are among the largest users of trucks and the express service is a very severe test of a truck's quality.

MOVING DAY ROBBED OF ITS TERROR

By JOHN N. WILLYS,
President The Gramm Motor Truck Company, Lima, Ohio.

No longer is moving day the bugaboo of the man whose business or pleasure requires that he move from city to suburb, or vice versa, or even to another city or town. The nightmarish visions of weary, long delays, broken or scratched or otherwise mutilated furniture is dissipated. No longer must moving day be the passing of the coterie of grim destroyers whose aim seems to be the reduction of his household goods to a mass of splintered and broken wood and upholstery. The motor truck has solved the problem of moving for him.

Distance has been annihilated by the power van. A removal of up to 100 miles no longer means a wait of from three or four days to as many weeks for the furniture which has been intrusted to the not too tender mercies of railroad freight handlers. The motor truck will carry his belongings the same distance in much less time and deliver them in infinitely better condition than was possible under the old methods.

Under ordinary conditions of weather and roads, a load of furniture placed on a motor truck in the morning can be set down at the new location forty, fifty or even sixty or seventy miles distant the same day. And because the goods are handled only twice in loading and unloading—they are in no wise injured in the transfer.

How different is this from the older method. A removal of fifty miles or more required the services of a railroad because a horse-and wagon delivery was impractical. Therefore, the goods had to be loaded into a van at the house and carted to the railroad freight depot, where another handling became necessary. Then, perhaps, after hours or days of waiting for a car they were transferred from the freight sheds and by men not especially noted for carefulness. Traffic congestion and other difficulties often caused long delays on the trip, and it was not uncommon to find cars sidetracked for long periods at some way station. On arriving at the new city, there were three more handlings, from the car to the freight sheds, from there to the van and then into the new house. As a result of these handlings it was not uncommon to find badly damaged furniture when the journey was completed, and frequently the delays and disappointments were even more serious.

SHOW NOTES

The increased business of the Republic Rubber Company having demanded larger quarters, Manager William Farreon has taken possession of the building at No. 883 Boylston street. The removal was made yesterday, and the company is now in its new quarters, where it has three large floors at its disposal. It is intended to keep a full line of goods in stock.

Albert S. Hawley, manager of the New York branch of the Kelly-Springfield Truck Company, has been a constant attendant at the show. Mr. Hawley is an old Boston boy, having been connected with the business locality, and his trip to Boston is in the way of a homecoming.

M. E. Brewster-Greene, director of automobile service of the Edwards-Stern & Company, Inc., of New York and Philadelphia, spent Saturday and Sunday in Boston, visiting the show, meeting old friends and keeping in touch with the truck situation. Mr. Brewster-Greene was for many years identified with the Locomobile company of America, in which position he did much to spread the Locomobile gospel.

Sales Manager Pontius of the Motz Tire & Rubber Company is decidedly busy these days, keeping in touch with the truck manufacturers and getting acquainted with the local situation. He and Local Manager Frank have done a large business during the past week.

The International Harvester Company reports the sale of twenty-five light delivery wagons.

* * *

The Republic truck is attracting a full share of attention at the show and is proving as popular as its namesake in the pleasure car field. Jim Liberty says that this is going to be the largest year on record for trucks, and he is in this line is substantiated by the contention of others.

G. M. C. UNIFORM PAINTING SCHEME WINS AT EXHIBIT

A feature of the G. M. C. electric display at Mechanics Building is the uniform painting of all the show cars, both chassis and complete trucks. The running gears are done in handsome grays with a dark strip in between. The bodies are dark green and red.

According to J. M. Larsden, manager of the G. M. C. electric division, this color scheme was chosen because its very symbolic would not detract from the proper display of construction features which the show exhibit is intended to emphasize.

"The uniformity and harmonious treatment of all the show cars," says Mr. Larsden, "is intended to suggest the structural balance, harmony and true sense of proportion which prevails throughout the entire G. M. C. line of twenty-five stock models."

Goodyear Truck Tires Lead

At the Mechanics Building more commercial vehicles are equipped with Goodyear tires than with any other make.

So it is at every leading show. At the New York and Chicago shows, Goodyear led by an overwhelming majority.

It is estimated that over sixty per cent. of the trucks made during 1913 will go out from truck factories with Goodyear equipment.

All this is the result of making a special tire for every service. Thus have users been enabled to select the tire best adapted to their particular needs.

A Tire For Every Service

Goodyear Solid Demountable 10,000 Mile Tire

A tire that abolishes the need of a tire applying station—a tire that is good enough to deserve a specific guaranty. This is the most serviceable tire for heavy duty trucks and meets the requirements of those who want a tire that can be easily put on and taken off.

Goodyear Demountable Cushion Truck Tire

Combines resiliency and durability. With its double notched treads, attains the utmost non-skid properties. This tire is demountable and fits S. A. E. Standard Wheel.

Goodyear Solid Metal-Base Truck Tire

Designed for heavy service, where truck owners are in close touch with tire applying stations and do not wish the Demountable feature.

Goodyear Solid Side Flange Truck Tire

This tire was designed as a "fixed on" type whose application is practicable to the S. A. E. wheel, and also for use wherever the "fixed on" type is preferred to demountable.

GOODYEAR AKRON, OHIO

Goodyear Individual Block Truck Tire

Specially adapted to heavy duty trucks that require exceptional traction and non-skid feature on rear wheels. The advantage of this tire is that, if a block is damaged, it can readily be replaced.

Goodyear Solid No-Rim-Cut Truck Tire

Possesses unusual resiliency for a solid tire. Thus it protects the car from violent strains and shocks of rough roads.

Goodyear Clincher Truck Tire

For light package delivery wagons or high speed trucks equipped with standard pneumatic clincher rims. Guaranty 6,000 miles—6 months.

M'CARTY PLANS HARD CAMPAIGN IN THE RING

Luther McCarty, white heavyweight champion, made his debut in Boston yesterday at one of the local theatres and it can be said that he scored a hit. McCarty is a great entertainer and with the assistance of Jeff Maddee, the South Boston heavyweight, he gave the audience a fine sample of his abilities on the squared circle in a fast three-round bout.

McCarty will finish his stage act here this week and next Tuesday he will go into strict training at Philadelphia for a series of bouts. His first encounter will be with Jim Flynn in Philadelphia on April 16.

Manager Billy McCarney is attempting to prove that Luther is the real champion and he will keep his protege busy. McCarney received a wire from the Pacific Coast yesterday offering McCarty several dates with the best heavyweights and the offer will probably be accepted.

"Luther is a real champion," said McCarney, "and after a few short bouts in the East all of the best heavyweights will be taken on for longer bouts. I have signed McCarty for a short bout with Jim Flynn to take place in Philadelphia, and negotiations are practically closed for a bout with Tommy Burns. These contests will, however, be only workouts for the big bouts which I have in view."

McCarty has the build of a champion and many compared Luther with Jim Jeffries when in his prime. He is fast on his feet and very clever and can stand a hard punch on any part of his body McCarty is as lively as a two-year-old and it was hard work for him to wait his turn to go on the stage and get into a three-round bout.

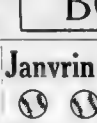
Janvrin Is Hero of Red Sox Boston Boy Great With Stick

By L. R. MURDOCH.



HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 25.—"Kid" Janvrin of Boston has showed another side of his baseball ability. Besides being a fast and sure fielder and a fleet and heady base-runner, he has now earned brackets as a knight of the order of swat. Off the right-handed pitching of Howard Camnitz he hoisted a mighty three-bagger far afield to the left fence in the fourth game with Pittsburgh. Off the left-handed flingings of Robinson, in whose twirling Fred Clarke has great confidence, he boosted another triple to the fence in right center field.

All this in four times at bat. One of his other efforts gave "Honus" Wagner a bit of difficulty and only when fielding by McCarthy prevented the boy from registering still another safe one.

On other grounds the three-sack clouts of the "boy wonder" would have been good for the circuit. If this batting is an index of the real form of the lad, he's a "find" all the way around the game.

HENDRIKSEN ALSO STARS AT BAT.

Janvrin is a natural ball player and since he has been at Hot Springs he has shown consistent evidence that he may become one of the future greats of baseball.

This game gave another youth a chance to shine at bat—Hendriksen. Olaf hit 1.000. His record was versatile, a home run, with the bases full, a triple, single and a base on balls.

Janvrin and Hendriksen, therefore, made five of the Red Sox ten hits in this game which, by the way, they won, 7 to 4. They also made four of the six extra base clouts of the world's champions. That's going some for substitutes.

Steve Yerkes made one of the other long smashes. In the first inning he lifted the ball over the fence in right centre field for a home run. Yerkes is awaiting the ball right and left and is playing twice as good a game in the field as he did at Hot Springs a year ago. Steve has "found himself" and is a second baseman of championship calibre all the way through this year. He is likely to become one of the heroes of Fenway Park this Summer.

Wagner Not Yet in Shape.

Except for Yerkes, the Red Sox are playing with a subdued mind and running things around the Pirates in actual play, regardless of the scores. Stahl is out of the game by preference. Jake is ready to school the youngsters and step out of the field at any time. He finds and develops what he wants for the first station. "Heine" Wagner is out of play because he is not yet ready. Larry Gardner is warming the bench while his right arm recovers.

Speaker has a tendency to go lame this Spring and is favoring his ankles as much as possible. The injury he received when "Buck" Herzog blocked the path for him in the world series seems to have weakened one ankle and a surplus of weight on the other bothers that one, too.

The only way to get such injuries safely is to quit play at once and work hard to heal the strained ligaments or muscles. In the big series Speaker had to keep on playing, and he was lame throughout. A week or so here has given ankle teasing "Duffy" Lewis to slide. Several times during the Pittsburgh series he has pulled up lame in the outfield.

The star outfielder is trying gradually to get his ankles in shape so that they will be sound when the ball rings, April 10.

Forrest Cady is the only other man on the observation list. The big catcher is still wearing his right hand in bandages.

O'Brien and Brandt Get Trials.

"Buck" O'Brien and Grover Brandt had their first trials yesterday. The Pirates picked up three singles, two doubles and a triple for three runs, all told, off O'Brien in five innings. Brandt showed a flash of speed in the remaining four sessions. The Pirates got him for three singles and a triple, which they converted into one run.

It was Camnitz' first trial of the season for the Pirates and he had one very poor inning the second when the Sox scored five runs on two hits and three passes with Hendriksen's four-bagger, with all bases occupied, did the most execution, that digit effort alone wiping the game for the Sox.

The Score.

BREAKFAST FOOD

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

CUPS.

But yesterday they spurned his mug upon the sporting page;
They gave him forty yards of type, for he was all the rage.
And when he slammed a three-base hit and broke the pennant up
They made a spoon and handed him a silver loving cup.

Tomorrow when he busts the ball or whiffs the air in vain,
They'll tell him where he disembarks in accents loud and plain,
They'll rise upon their bleacher seats and put him on the pan,
And chortle when the manager presents him with a can.

GUNBOAT SMITH SPURNS MATCH WITH M'CARTY

By ED CURLEY.

NEW YORK, March 25.—These be dangerous times, m'lads. Danger besets us on all sides. Not the physical kind that all brave men welcome. Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho! The woo-woo. The scandal monger has left his lair, and the black villyun is sowing seeds of strife and discontent.

And who, do you think, is his victim? None other than Gunboat Smith, the brawny, curly-haired, stub-nosed warrior who struck down Bombardier Wells in the twinkling of their feet some few moons ago in the amphitheatre.

Well we remember the night of the tourney. The instant the laurel was placed on the brow of Gunboat his manager, James Buckley, hopped in the center of the ring and in loud tones demanded to know whether Luther McCarty would care to have any part of Gunboat's play. Draw closer, men, for the dirty work begins.

The disseminator of foul words now blesses that Luther McCarty is matched to fight Jim Flynn in Philadelphia. That sounds well. Yes, but he adds: "Gunboat Smith could have had the bout, but he didn't appear keen for the struggle."

You see the hidden barb? Is Gunboat afraid to fight McCarty. And after what we heard Manger Buckley say! Horrors! What's the world coming to?

HARVARD CUBS SURE TO STAR ON THE TRACK

By J. O. JOHNSTONE,
Champion High Jumper of United States and Canada).

Prospects of turning out a strong freshman track team at Harvard are very bright if the numerous athletes do not fall victims to the approaching hour examinations. Every year these tests, which determine a student's eligibility in any line, especially in athletics, are looked upon with anxiety, not only by the athletes themselves but also by the interested students.

The team is noticeably strong in the middle distant events. William Bingham, freshman track captain and also class president, is the most noted half-miler in the freshmen ranks. He proved his superiority over many during the indoor season, when he ran anchor man for the relay team. Wiggin, Riddle, Siddle and W. Lamont will also figure at this distance.

Mahan Star in Sprints.

The two former were members of last Winter's undefeated relay team. The quarter-mile event will be taken care of by the above mentioned men, and in addition, McK in and Pennypacker.

The sprints will be well taken care of by E. H. Mahan, captain of last year's freshmen football squad. Mahan ran practically a dead heat with Burns in the century dash at Exeter and Andover's dual meet of 1911. The latter is a member of the crack B. A. A. short distance relay. F. B. Allen and Morse will probably be heard of also.

H. McKin and H. M. Fullerton are likely candidates for the mile run. The latter appears to be the weakest point of the team, although many may be developed by Coach Donovan. The out-door practice will give a good line on the timber-toppers. L. G. Richards, Twitchell, and Wannmaker are the best men in the high jump. Mahan is a likely candidate for first honors in the three freshmen events.

In the first meet, which is to be held May 3, with Exeter Academy, the breadth jumps and hurdles will have a formidable opponent in H. T. Worthington, Exeter's captain. The latter cleared over twenty-three feet at the Olympic try-outs last June and easily secured a position on the Olympic team.

Team Has Bright Outlook.

Aside from these events, there appears to be no startling contenders for premier honors on the Exeter side. Teschner looks good in the mile and Dougherty in the quarter and may possibly be a surprise.

This is, however, the Harvard freshmen look very strong, and it will take a well-balanced team to defeat them.

DARTMOUTH PLAYERS PRACTICE IN OPEN

HANOVER, N. H., March 25. Dartmouth's outfield got its first real out-door practice yesterday, when Coach Woo brought his men out on the campus for a spirited workout. A large number watched the work of Wilson, Twitchell, Sullivan and Hogsett, who showed up well. Ghee, quarterback on last year's football team, was given his first trial in the outfield, having been shifted from the infield, and showed much class.

BOWER SELECTED TO CAPTAIN ARLINGTON

Owing to the resignation of George Lowe from the captaincy of this year's Arlington High School baseball team, Bradley Bower, the diminutive shortstop of last year's nine, has been unanimously elected captain of the team. Lowe had the honor of being captain of the football, hockey and baseball teams for 1912, but as the football and hockey teams had made the records under his leadership, he felt that he could give another man a chance at baseball.

CHANCE IN FORM.

Chance continues to improve, and the ex-Cub chieftain says he will surprise some people, who thought he could not come back.

It is to be hoped that the "Peerless One" does not refer to his old boss, one Charles Webb Murphy.

B. C. High Rowing Candidates Start Work Tomorrow

Boston College High School, the latest entrant to latter-day scholastic rowing circles, will have its first practice tomorrow afternoon. Irving J. Heath, the energetic manager of athletics at the college and prep. school, issued a call for candidates last week, and about thirty-five men responded, and it is expected that fifteen more will come out with the other candidates.

The squad includes some big men, and a few of them have had previous experience, so that prospects are favorable for a creditable showing for the B. C. High crew on its initial appearance on the water.

For the first week the practice will be under the direction of Irving J. Heath and will consist of setting up exercises in the high school gymnasium. An effort is also being made to secure indoor rowing machines for the candidates. Swimming tests will be held as every crew candidate must qualify as a swimmer before the last of the month, as the men will go on the water March 31.

PENN ATHLETES SEEK TITLE IN COLLEGE GAMES

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-mile Champion of the United States and Canada.)

When the big intercollegiate championships take place in the Harvard Stadium on May 29 and 30, the University of Pennsylvania will be one of the strongest competitors for the honor of winning the title of track and field champion of the Eastern colleges in the United States. The winner of this meet could well be classed as the champion college team of the entire country, for the Westerners have never been able to defeat the strong Eastern representatives

Penn has been without the coaching of Mike Murphy, that great Olympic trainer, this year and as a result the Red and Blue college has been unable to live up to its former reputation for without Murphy at the helm things do not run right and the athletes who represent Penn have not the interest in competition that they otherwise would have.

Murphy May Coach Team.

The latest reports from Philadelphia indicate that Murphy will have charge of the large track squad during the coming months and that he intends to force them to the limit to win.

The strength of the track team will lie in its wealth of sprinters and 2-milers, for this year will witness the appearance of Ronald Lipptscott, the great speedster of Olympic fame

STALLINGS HAS PLAN FOR SPRING WORK

PILGRIMS MAKE GOOD SHOWING IN GAME

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

ATLANTA, Ga., March 25.—In the days the Boston Nationals are yet to remain here they hope to show the same kind of improvement they showed yesterday over the two games played here last week. The warm weather is now getting in its licks and the Boston players are taking every advantage of it. The play in yesterday's game was fast in every way.

Ginger Pepper Johnson, Worcesters, Decatur and all the other southern teams in baseball, have never yet been able to keep the Stallings machine from getting down to its real stride. The team showed traces of real championship ball. They hit well, fielded perfectly and ran bases with one exception. In that one case, where Maranville and Sweeney took desperate chances and failed to win out. There is no fear, however, that Jack will kept the same down for the Bostons found little difficulty in solving the delivery of either pitcher offered by Atlanta.

Becker, who pitched the last four innings for the locals, proved to be the easiest man Stallings' hirelings have faced on the trip. They banged five hits off his delivery in the seventh and chalked up four runs. They made cheap, mulls or nonplus and the grading would cost him here.

In addition to a diamond for every official of the six men there would be a tennis court, outdoor handball courts and everything possible to make the athlete's work out days.

Would Reduce Team's Expenses.

Even a trifle is lost in Boston Nationals spring training as $7,500 a day for Noah during training. The financial possibilities of such a plan that is simple enough. And the way Coach Tom Jones has got the best out of the players.

$2,500 the total could be taken in Hot Springs and the training would be over. The point would just be to send the players there and have them work out. Everything else would be saved. The chances of injuries would be reduced to a minimum. And the players would be in shape for the season's opening. Besides, the players would be in shape for the season's opening. Besides, the players would be in shape for the season's opening.

Blues Goes Under Knife.

There are several real theatres in town and the Boston Nationals are not alone in the field. Many a baseball player has gone under the knife to have a new nose, chin or ear. Many a baseball player has gone under the knife to have a new nose, chin or ear.

Al White, the Cincinnati Reds' pitcher, has had his nose fixed. Hal Chase, the Buffalo first baseman, has had his nose fixed. Hal Chase, the Buffalo first baseman, has had his nose fixed.

Bill Rodgers, the Boston Nationals' catcher, has had his nose fixed. Bill Rodgers, the Boston Nationals' catcher, has had his nose fixed.

MATTY BALDWIN PICKED TO WIN

By JACK CONWAY.

MATTY BALDWIN has been made a favorite in his twelve-round bout with Steve Kennedy for the lightweight championship of New England, which is scheduled to take place at Manchester, N. H., this evening. Fickle "fans" believe that Baldwin's experience and aggressiveness will cause the downfall of the popular Hyde glove wielder from Lawrence.

Kennedy, however, is certain that he will be returned the victor. If confidence alone won battles in the ring, we would award the decision to Jim Crilley's protege without any needless delay.

"I have been trying to get a bout with Baldwin for over a year," declared Kennedy today. "I have always considered Matty one of the greatest lightweights in the world, and I realize that if I am able to vanquish him that my future in the ring will be a bright one. I am in the best of condition for the fray, and am sure that I will outpoint the Bunker Hill favorite."

Baldwin, of course, expects to win Matty's cohorts admit is credible. He doesn't know the meaning of the word fear. He has not almost every battle weight of prominence that has arisen in the squared circle and he could tell stories over the best of them.

ALEX M'LEAN, manager of Gilbert Gallant, has received an offer from Newport R. I., for a bout between Sammy Robertson and Gallant, to take place during the first week of April. McLean has notified the Newport promoter that Gallant will not be able to box before the second week in April, as he must first swap punches with Johnny Dohr of Brooklyn at Lowell on April 4, but that Gallant will be perfectly willing to meet Robertson at the Newport organization after his encounter at Lowell.

Dohr has not fought at Fall River since October 2 and after giving up one of the fastest twelve-round bouts ever witnessed in that city the affair was declared a draw by the referee. There are many "fans" at the ringside, however who believed that Gallant had a shade on his opponent. The Chelsea youth says that Dohr will be no doubt as to which of the two is a better man than the navy champion if they clash at Newport.

* * *

WILLIE RITCHIE, the young man who signs himself as lightweight champion of the world, will probably soon quit the stage and decide to draw real fighting. The Frisco lad will not have to stay like long as there are several dozen Pittsburg fans and a number of other fighters who, but who, as a matter of fact are welterweights, who believe that they are capable of defeating Billy Nolan's protege.

Ritchie has not engaged in a six-round go since he won the title by defeating Wolgast on a foul. When he steps into the ring he should give Joe Rivers the first bout. The Mexican has proved that he is a real ring star and capable of holding his own with the best of them.

TOM HALPIN OUT OF BIG BROOKLYN RACE

Thomas J. Halpin, the holder of the indoor quarter mile record of 49 3-5 seconds made at Boston a few weeks ago and who was to represent the Boston Athletic Association in the John H. Lyon memorial quarter-mile race at the 8 Nat Athletic Club games in Brooklyn tomorrow night, will not compete, owing to an attack of tonsilitis.

Cambridge-Oxford Track Teams Sure to Compete Here

LONDON March 25—The practical assurance of another Oxford-Cambridge Yale-Harvard track and field contest this year is expected to get satisfactorily at a meeting of the Oxford and Cambridge athletic wild almost in a conference which the annual contest will be held in London. It is understood that the Oxford and Cambridge A. A. trainer will be sent to this country to select the best team.

A preliminary trial for the team will be held at Oxford

WORD FROM WELSH.

NEW YORK, March 25.—A wireless message from Frederick Welsh, British middle-weight champion of the world, that he would arrive from Europe in time to meet Willie Lewis in the 10-round bout at the Fairmont Athletic Club on April 4, was received by Promoter Tex Rickard today.

LAUDER MAKES HIT.

ST. LOUIS, March 25.—Harry Lauder made a hit with the St. Louis Nationals in the exhibition game played here today. The Scotch comedian was a guest of honor at the game and was given a big reception by the players. He was presented with a baseball uniform and a baseball bat autographed by the players.

TO FEATURE BASEBALL

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 25.—Baseball will be the feature of the Kansas City Athletic Club's indoor meeting on March 29. Dr. Diamond, who is to be the referee, has announced that he will be present.

Brookline Tank Men and New York A. C. in Revere Meet

The Brookline Swimming Club and the New York Athletic Club have been matched in a dual swimming meet at the Ocean Park Pool, Revere, on April 12. The program will include 50, 100 and 220-yard races, a diving contest and a relay race. It will be one of the features of the Metropolitan Championships and the "Speared Seals" will make a new era in inter-city competition. For years these two clubs have made their the present high water mark in Eastern and Middle Western swimming circles and the appearance of the Eastern representatives of the Brookline club has forced the local swimmers, who are almost a monthly, to see that the participation is confined

SCHOOLBOY OUTDOOR MEET ON JUNE 27

Dr. Thomas F. Harrington announces that the Boston High School Field and Track League will hold its annual outdoor track meet on June 27 at Wood Island Park, East Boston. Thirty events will make up the program this Spring. The running high, step and jump, standing and running with jumps have been added to the program

Trousseaux of Spring Brides a Veritable Riot of Gorgeous Colorings

One of the evening gowns—a foundation of mandarin satin with black chiffon over shadow lace and jet and gold bugle embroidery.

The going away suit is of silk poplin in a new shade of taupe. The sleeves are much fuller, and the coat has a wide embroidered collar.

Interview with Ella Wheeler Wilcox on "The Battlefield of Love"

Abelard and Heloise Surprised by Fulbert, Heloise's Uncle

Abelard and Heloise, from an Old Painting by R. Cosway, First Published in June, 1774

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

THE world's great battlefields are always shrines for tourists. Waterloo is yearly visited by thousands of travelers, and pilgrimages are continually made in our own land to Bunker Hill, Yorktown and Gettysburg.

When I went to France it was desire to visit another great battlefield, a field where waged a strife that has resounded through centuries—that remarkable strife between religion and human passion, in the hearts of Abelard and Heloise.

Guide books point only to the tomb at Pere Lachaise as all that survives of philosopher and pupil, lover and maid, husband and wife, monk and man, but it was my good fortune to learn more of the lives of this ill-fated pair than the translated volumes of their letters related, and to see more of the places and objects associated with their names than the tomb at Pere Lachaise.

Guided through the mazes of the cemetery to the tomb of the immortal lovers by Charles Moonen, whose card and conversation proclaimed him "Homme des lettres," while he acted as professional guide, I learned an interesting fact.

"At Argenteuil," said Mr. Moonen, "you will find the old convent, still standing, though no longer a convent, where Heloise received her first communion, and to which she returned afterward to take the vows for life."

At the Old Convent

So to Argenteuil the next day was the pilgrimage made; at first to meet with many discouragements and baffling contradictions from residents of that ancient and historic environ of Paris, for Heloise lived long ago—and while poets, and the savants, and the bookworms, and the dreamers of Argenteuil may all know her domicile, it was not my good fortune to meet any of them that first hour.

Argenteuil, in truth, is more famed for its excellent asparagus than for its lovers of romantic history. But, at last, a pere-la-faced nun, telling her beads as she walked before a church door, directed me aright.

"It is No. 70 Boulevard Heloise, madame, and a private residence," she said. "Here in this church you will find some of the sacred relics taken from the convent when Heloise and her sisters in Christ were forced to leave and go to the Paraclet. You must come and see them another day; we have services now, and they could not be shown."

Driving along the boulevard in the glorious sunshine, the story of Heloise came back to me, in all its force; that old story of mad love, sad suffering, and life-long sorrow.

Heloise had been sent to the convent of Argenteuil for the rudiments of her education, by her uncle, the Canon Fulbert. She had returned to his home (now No. 11 Quai aux Fleurs—where an inscription over the door commemorates the fact), a brilliant, beautiful young creature, who was famed for her intellect and learning, while still in the first flush of girlhood.

Abelard the Teacher

Canon Fulbert was proud of her attainments; and prouder still when she expressed a wish to study the philosophy of the great Abelard, then in the height of his fame, and chief of the school of Paris, the nucleus of what is known today as the great Sorbonne.

Abelard was thirty-seven. Heloise a little more than half that age, perhaps—and one does not even need to recall the fact that the eleventh century was an era of incompetence to understand how Abelard, in his intimate association with his beautiful pupil, stood in danger of falling from his pinnacle of religious power.

The Canon Fulbert, believing in the prudence and wisdom of his niece (as we believe only and always in their own), and having faith in the sincerity of Abelard's desire, permitted the philosopher to become a member of his household in order to give Heloise the full benefit of his instruction.

Not only was Abelard given the privilege of teaching the beautiful girl, but he was authorized to chastise her if she became indifferent or negligent. In his letter to a friend long afterward Abelard wrote:

"We were under one roof, and we became one heart. Under the pretext of study we gave ourselves, utterly to love. We opened our books but there were more kisses than explanations, and our eyes sought each other rather than the texts.

"Yet sometimes, to still further deceive the uncle, I chastised Heloise as a bad pupil, but the blows were those of love, not of anger. As I grew more and more drunken with passion, I cared less and less for my school and my studies.

"It was a violent effort for me to go about my duties. I lost all inspiration. I could only speak to my students from memory, repeating old lessons, and when I undertook to write I produced only love verses."

They Are Discovered

Canon Fulbert discovered the affair between Abelard and Heloise, and insisted that they be married. Abelard, in case such a marriage became public, would lose all chance of preferment in the Church. Heloise, knowing this, protested against the marriage with him and objected as long as she could.

Nevertheless, Abelard, held by his promise to Fulbert, made Heloise his wife. She returned to Paris with her uncle after the ceremony, and Fulbert, despite his promise of keeping the marriage secret, announced it to the world.

Heloise promptly denied it, knowing that public sentiment would condemn the legal part of his dereliction, while it would condone his amatory sin. So enraged was the uncle by her denials that he subjected the poor girl to the greatest abuses.

Abelard, informed of the situation, sent Heloise to the Convent of Argenteuil, and there she donned the robe of the sisters. With the exception of the veil, and lived ostensibly the religious life of the holy sisters.

The two lovers still met, and this coming to the ears of Fulbert caused him to wreak a fiendish vengeance on Abelard. Shortly after Abelard entered the monastery of St. Denis, and Heloise, at his wish, took the veil for life in the Convent of Argenteuil.

And now here was I approaching that very convent, no longer a convent, but an ordinary Parisian house set back in a court, and bearing the placard, "A Louer."

A pretty concierge walked in the garden, and when I explained my errand, her face lighted with sympathy, and taking down a bunch of keys from a nail on the inner wall, she unlocked the door of a room opening upon a small enclosed garden.

"This," she said, "was the sleeping room of Heloise. Her bed stood in that alcove. By the window was once a door which led to the confessional and outside was her garden, where she walked."

Where Heloise Lived

It was overwhelming—the thought of it all. Here Heloise had first studied, a happy, brilliant, carefree girl. Here she had returned after her marriage to escape the cruelty of her uncle, and here had she taken her vows for life in the bloom of her youth, saying as she accepted the veil which abut her in forever from the world: "Criminal that I was to bring such misfortune on thee; receive now my expiation in this chastisement which I must bear forever."

Even in that solemn hour it was her devotion to Abelard, not to heaven, which engaged her thought. It was many years before her heart was given to God.

Later I visited the convent again with a photographer, and was shown by Mr. Jules Provin, its owner, the subterranean passage through which Abelard used to make his secret entrance, and the old worn stone staircase which his impatient feet trod.

The passage, now partly walled up to form a cellar, used to extend through to the Seine, which is only a short distance from the convent. Mr. Provin assured me that Abelard made his entrance by boat, and showed me in the roof of the cellar a hook which had probably served as an anchorage for tying the bark of Cupid.

A Little Known Place

Mr. Provin did not seem to realize the fortune lying unused in his grasp. He desired to rent his property—for something less than four hundred dollars a year, but could not believe that by making his history known and turning it into a goal for tourists, charging a franc entrance fee, he would soon be independent for life.

Argenteuil is only twenty minutes from Paris, and thousands of tourists would gladly journey thither and pay their francs did the guide books direct them to the old convent, where began that long martyrdom of Heloise, that terrible life of solitude and suffering for which she was so unfitted; that crucifixion of the passionate woman on the altar of the (for many years) indifferent recluse.

Sixteen years afterward she wrote to Abelard, "I took the veil to obey you—not to please God."

It was not from this convent, but from the Paraclet the famous letters of Heloise were written. There Abelard's body was brought after his death at the priory of St. Marcel in 1142, and there Heloise was buried beside him twenty-two years later. No stone remains of the Paraclet; it was destroyed in 1800 and the tomb and its contents conveyed to Pere Lachaise.

They Never Met Again

It is believed that Abelard and Heloise never met after she took the veil, save during the public ceremonies attending the dedication of the Paraclet to her service.

Any other impression fails to the ground as impossible, after perusing the letters of Heloise written long years after she became a nun—letters which are reproaches for his absence and silence, during all these years—and with petitions for a favor and affection; letters filled with burning memories of a love that would not die—and with passionate pleas for some word of recognition from the man for whom she had sacrificed honor, name, liberty and the world, in the morning of life.

Abelard traveled and gave discourses at various periods after he took the monastic vows.

Heloise wrote a book of rules for the women of the convents, which was blessed by the court of Rome, and entered into the constitution of all the monasteries of the time.

She was famed for her erudition and her wisdom during her era. But it is by her letters to Abelard that she is remembered, because those letters carried the heart of a woman endowed with the rare quality of loving with absolute abandon, unselfishness, purity, and of consecrating her life to the memory of that love.

Their Fame Rests on Love

It proves how much greater is a lover than a philosopher, when we realize what a renowned man was Abelard in his day, yet how utterly he is forgotten save as the lover of Heloise. He was the first poet, and one of the first musicians of the twelfth century.

He was so broad and so brilliant and so courageous in his ideas that he brought a revolution into the religious world and antagonized the entire tradition-bound clergy. He was prosecuted in consequence, but his name grew in glory, and his school of philosophy, the first to teach the liberty of human thought, could not accommodate his vast audiences, and he was obliged to address them in the open air.

It is no wonder that this man seemed to Heloise, then seventeen years of age, a veritable god, or that she forgot the world in his love. And so great was that love, that it alone, of all Abelard's glory, is remembered today.

Philosophies change—religions alter—creeds die—the minds of men are revolutionized on these subjects, but love lives on, and the passion endures—the same yesterday, today, and forever in the human heart. Only he who loves is immortal.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all of my housework. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I ras down with nervous prostration. I as pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad ain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could ardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

When the Blow Fell

WHEN a woman says of a guest, "She comes of one of the oldest Southern families," you are expected to get down on your knees and bow three times.

The woman Mrs. Lysander John Appleton had invited to dinner was said to be "of one of the oldest Southern families" and presentations were made befitting her station. As Daysey Mayme expressed it, the visit "was an oasis." And cooking is really worth while, in the opinion of a girl like Daysey Mayme, unless it can be likened to "an oasis."

"I will make the soup," said Daysey Mayme, and she gave it a name that sounded as if it had strayed from the bottles of a Balkan war dispatch. There was plain old hen, also under disguise; there were sweet potatoes, peas, parsnips and carrots, every one under an alias, and as for the salad!

"That," said Daysey Mayme, "will be my piece de resistance," and she put in it so many different things that any one eating his full portion would be doomed to furnish the foundation of a daisy bed before Spring.

It is Mrs. Appleton's proud boast that she is so hospitable she gets hospitality-paralysis in her right arm passing things to her guests, and that no guests ever stayed with her as long as a week without having to wear at least three porous plasters when she went home. On several occasions visiting friends have returned to the station in ambulances, and when one guest died at her home the knowledge that her perfect cherry pie and gooseberry ice cream were responsible, had softened the Blow.

She had a reputation to sustain, so she gave her daughter "carte blanche." "Though I really," she added, "don't know if we have any in the house."

The table alone resplendent in its borrowed silver and cut glass. For a centerpiece there was a cake with a picksnipey boy doll perched on top, holding in his hand a chinaware hoe. "Symbolic of the South," Daysey Mayme explained: "You know the real old Southern families stir their cakes with a hoe. That's why it is called hoe cake."

The guest arrived. The family went to its knees and bowed three times. The dinner was announced by the borrowed maid, and the guest and family were seated.

Then the guest produced a small tin box from which she took two very thin and very pale crackers.

"I will trouble you," she said to Mrs. Appleton, "for nothing more for my dinner than a cup of boiling water and a pinch of salt. Up in Battle Creek, Michigan, where I have lived all my life and my mother before me, we eat nothing but Health Food."

Then Daysey Mayme slid to the floor.

ARMS AND THE MAN

BANG! Bang! Bang!

It seemed to the pretty girl that rifles were cracking everywhere, which really isn't surprising, seeing that it was manoeuvre times, and she was standing in the middle of the field of mimic war and battle.

"Oo-oo!" she screamed—a nice, decorous little scream—as she stepped back into the astonished arms of the young man who happened to be standing near her.

Then she blushed—a charming, most becoming blush.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" she said. "I was frightened by the rifles."

"Not at all!" replied the young man. "Let's go over and watch the artillery!"

Very Similar

"Your husband says he leads a dog's life," said one woman.

"Yes, it's very similar," answered the other. "He comes in with muddy feet, makes himself comfortable by the fire, and waits to be fed."

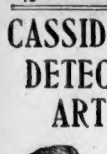
CASSIDY TELLS HOW TO DETECT FOOD THAT IS ARTIFICIALLY COLORED



Mr. Cassidy today discusses the question of artificial colors in foods, and asks, "Where does the blame lie?" He believes that to a certain extent, the consumer is responsible.

But it isn't the consumer's fault, for he has been educated to expect highly colored foods, by long years of food adulteration.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The morning papers contain a little seven-line dispatch to the effect that three children in Saskatchewan, Canada, have been killed by eating candy artificially colored.

The dispatches do not quote the authority upon which the blame is laid on the candy. As a matter of fact, it will probably be impossible to prove that the candy did kill those three children. Such cases are extremely rare.

But the fact remains that the use of artificial colors in foods constitutes one of the great dangers of the day, to the national health. Even suppose the colors to be harmless, they are in food, in nine cases out of ten, to deceive the consumer. For example, yellow color is used in cake, to make the purchaser believe that cake is rich in eggs. That cake is, therefore, a debased product. It is these debased products, robbed of much of their food value, which are doing much to undermine the national health today. Our foods are not real foods any longer.

Today and Twenty Years Ago.

Twenty years ago, if you ate a course dinner at a fashionable hotel, you got two or three courses rich in food value, and a course or so that were really only confections, prettily prepared, artistically served, delighting the eye, but with little nutriment.

Today, many of the expensive viands dished up at our leading hostelries are not food—they are confections—works of art—which encumber, but do not satisfy, the stomach.

Artificial colors are used everywhere. I do not believe there is a single State where they are barred.

Yet artificial colors have no food value, and they are either cheats—making a debased food appear palatable and nourishing—or else they have the same relation to food that rouge has to a pretty face—they are there for adornment.

I DO NOT BELIEVE ARTIFICIAL COLORS SHOULD BE USED IN FOOD.

There is no valid reason for their use. Their use carries dangers in its train.

Whose fault is it that artificial colors are used?

Let me tell you a story.

The Honest Dealer.

In a restaurant near my office, strawberry ice cream is a specialty. I ordered some the other day. It was a very faint pink—scarcely colored at all, and not at all like the usual rosy dish.

I happened to know the manager, and called him.

"I see you don't use any artificial color in your ice cream," I remarked.

"No," he said—"Just the fresh strawberries."

I knew he was telling the truth. "How do your customers like it?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "I have lots of kicks. Some of them deny that it is a strawberry ice cream at all, when they first see it. To them, I simply say—'I'll take it back if you like—you needn't eat it.' But by that time they have usually tasted it, found the berry taste so much richer than in the ordinary dyed cream, and insist on keeping the dish."

"What is your recipe?" I asked.

"I use six quarts of berries in a twenty quart freezer. That is, there are six quarts of crushed berries in every twenty quarts of ice cream served."

Try it Yourself.

Now some of you housewives that want to test his statement, when strawberries get a little cheaper, try the experiment of making strawberry cream, with more berries than the recipe calls for.

You will at once realize that most ice cream is colored.

Strawberry cake icing has the same story—the berries won't give the rich red that a customer expects. Peach ice cream is the same, and raspberry and all the others. I venture to say there aren't twenty plants in Boston making ice cream or cake that don't use any artificial color.

Let me tell you something about food—that you can test in your own kitchen. When you remember these facts you will readily detect dyed foods in the stores.

Tomato catsup is a very dark red. The catsup of commerce shades to a far lighter tint.

Natural rice is a beautiful golden brown. The rice sold in your stores either has this brown rubbed off or is coated with glucose and talc to make it shining white.

Sulphur-Bleached Fruits.

Evaporated fruits are dark brown. Bleached with sulphur they are light brown, and keep better.

Natural peas are pale green. Canned peas are apt to be bright green—with the help of copperas.

Pure soda water will bubble, but will not collect into froth at the top. Soap bark or saponin is used to make these bubbles into froth.

I could cite a hundred such cases. Just remember that if you make a cake, or a custard, or ice cream, and find it pale and wan compared to the brilliant "Stone Product," you may be sure the store product is artificially colored—and so will bear watching.

Artificial colors have no place in food. Where used, they are almost always used to cheat or deceive the customer. But the housewife must bear at least a part of the blame for the universal acceptance of colored foods.

Infant Mortality Laid in Part to Candy Cheaters

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—Health Commissioner Powers has opened war on adulterated foods in this city and State. In a recent public statement, he summerized the chief causes of infant mortality. The list includes:

Manufacturers of adulterated candies.

Manufacturers of adulterated foods.

Doctors who don't report their cases of contagious diseases.

Dirty milkmen.

Flies.

Tubercular cows.

Persons who conceal contagious diseases.

Hokey-pokey men.

Reckless automobile speeders.

Violators of quarantine.

Child slavers.

High Cost of Living Has Come to Stay Says Dr. Harrington

"Ward 8 has one of the densest populations and one of the lowest infant death rates. The difference is largely to the rejection or use of bottle feeding. Ten artificially fed babies die to every naturally fed baby; so that 90 or 95 per cent. of the deaths are preventable," declared Dr. Thomas F. Harrington, director of school hygiene in Boston in a talk on "The Prevention of Disease vs. the Cost of Living," at No. 6 Marlboro street, under the auspices of the Women's Municipal League. Continuing he said:

The increase in the cost of living must be regarded as a necessary consequence of the social, economic and political development of the world. It is made up of so many varied and complete items that a general reduction of prices is not likely.

STEAMER FRANCISCO TOWS LINER TO PORT

Captain J. C. Clark of the Wilson liner Francisco, bound for Boston from Hull, Eng., will receive large salvage money for picking up at sea the Swedish passenger steamer Texas, which had lost her propeller, and proceeding to port with her in tow. The boiling where the Francisco left in with the disabled Texas is not known definitely, but it is supposed to be somewhere about 1,300 miles east of Boston.

COMMITTEE HEARS ELECTION CHARGES

CONCORD, N. H., March 25.—Chairman Smith of the special legislative committee investigating alleged corruption in the recent Senatorial election in this State will resume its public hearing Friday. The committee has been in session behind closed doors. Attorney William M. Chase and Judge James W. Remick, Concord, and Attorney Sherman E. Burroughs of Manchester have been retained by the committee.

WEEKS TO SEND IN THE ALDRICH BILL

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Senator Weeks has announced that on the first day of the extra session of Congress he will introduce the Aldrich Currency bill and also a bill for the reorganization of the postoffice department which he helped to draft while he was chairman of the committee on Postoffices and Post Roads in the House of Representatives.

CABARET HITS FOR RETAIL TRADE BOARD

Cabaret "bits" directed at some of the prominent members will be heard by the Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce tonight. The affair will be held in the auditorium of the City Club.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock markets opened firm and their followers seemed in a more cheerful mood. Locally trading was more active than usual, but London and New York was on a small scale. Early price changes in Boston were mostly within a narrow range, although Calumet & Arizona advanced a full point to 65, but at the end of the first hour some notable gains were shown in the copper list. Granby was up 1⅝ and Butte & Superior was 1¼ higher.

There had not been much movement in Mellen issues, Boston & Maine and New Haven opened unchanged and had stayed so. Boston Elevated advanced.

Around 11 o'clock, in New York, American Can was selling at 29⅜, up 1⅜. Leaders there were holding early strength.

Towards the close of the London market prices were around the best level of the session. Sentiment had improved because of reports that Turkish defences at Adrianople were collapsing.

Germany obtained ₰250,000 in gold in the London open market.

Earlier New York Prices Higher.

The New York market opened firm and with an advancing tendency. Prices of nearly all important issues rose fractionally on small transactions. The advance was significant because the market was professional and indicated that habitual traders are more optimistic. A New York dispatch says:—"This was regarded as evidence that the market incentive was some development that had no connection with the politics situation abroad."

The foreign political and monetary situation is looked upon in the light of being much improved. It is believed that there is a large short interest among professional traders.

After half an hour there was profit-taking which caused some recessions.

Western Union was strong in early trading, advancing a point to 67. Among other gains were Steel common ⅝, Southern Pacific ½, Reading ⅝, Lehigh Valley ⅛, California Petroleum ⅛. American Can lost ⅛, and recessions occurred also in Rock Island, Amalgamated Copper, Speaks & Ohio and Canadian Pacific.

The Curb was irregular.

After three days' recess the London exchange reopened with a cheerful sentiment. It is thought that the Balkan situation is progressing towards peace. Strength to consols was partly due to the hope that the Bank of England will reduce its minimum discount rate early next month. American stocks were quiet, being above New York parity. There was both London and Amsterdeam buying.

New Southern Pacific Charter?

It has been rumored around Wall Street that the Southern Pacific Company is contemplating the advisability of getting a new charter that would enable it to purchase its own stock. It was said that a deal would be taken up prior to the taking over of a large block of the $126,650,000 Southern Pacific stock held by the Union Pacific and ordered sold by the Court. Maxwell Evarts, Southern Pacific counsel and a Union Pacific official, said they had no information about such a plan.

May Take Up Currency.

Senator Owen, chairman of the new Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, proposes to summon its confrees together when Congress convenes on April 7 for the purpose of taking up the question of currency reform. He says:

"One of the great needs of this country with respect to the money question is to bring about that condition where the small merchant and the man with limited means may obtain such credit at all times as his standing entitles him to, the small bank at the country cross-roads and in the large centers does not have to pay a dollar for a dollar's credit when New York says money is tight.

"It is just as important to the welfare of the country that the small bankers and merchants should have credit extended to them as it is that the big fellows should have it.

"This is done now, but the things are running smoothly, but the moment the money centers set up the cry of 'tight money,' every banker is compelled to stop his loans. That paralyzes business all along the line. It would be the duty of Congress to so amend our currency laws that credit could be obtained at all times. When that is done much of the trouble in our country will disappear."

Senator Owen wants to have his committee prepared to deal with the currency question during the special session of Congress, if President Wilson thinks sufficient progress is being made with the tariff to justify such a course.

Copper Up in London.

When the London Metal Exchange reopened after the Easter holidays spot copper and futures were up 2s 6d each, and the market tone was firm. Since Thursday last copper exports have totalled 1,121 tons and since March 1, 33,748.

Copper wire makers reports that their mills are being run at capacity. They are quoting their product at 16 cents a pound, but delivery and specifications entail special prices to cover varying conditions.

Concerning the situation in the New York metal market, it is said there: "While small producers and second hands had been following their usual program of undercutting the regular producers, it came to light yesterday that cut prices could not command desired deliveries. Thus, while 14¾ to 14¾ cents a pound is for deliveries at sellers' options. On the other hand when full specifications are put buyers' options are given consideration.

Financial News in Brief.

It is reported that the M. Rumly Co. earned about 10 per cent. in 1912 on its $11,000,000 outstanding common stock, which is about twice the dividend rate now being paid. Gross sales for the last calendar year approximated $17,000,000 as compared with $10,000,000 in the previous one.

The American Steel and Wire Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, has advanced wire prices $1 a ton, effective yesterday. This brings its price up to that of the independent companies.

The Remington Typewriter Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, net earnings $1,705,475, an increase of $42,903. Surplus after preferred dividends and charges was $644,630, a decrease of $14,464, and equal to 6¼ per cent. on the common stock, as against 6¾ per cent. the previous year.

Goldfield Consolidated reports for the fourteen months ended December 31, 1912, net profits $4,886,399, equal to $1.37 per share. This compares with $7,256,040 for the year ended October 31, 1911. The company had cash on hand $728,000, and bullion $214,773, with no debts.

On March 15 there were a total of 37,773 idle cars on the tracks of American and Canadian railroads. This was a comparative increase of 6,304 for the two weeks ending on that date.

When sterling exchange advanced 15 points there was talk in financial districts to the effect that this might cause a renewal of gold exporting during this week. But at the present rate foreign banks would have to pay a premium for it and it could not reach the other side in time to serve in April 1 settlements.

The New York sub-treasury gained $1,281,000 from banks yesterday and has gained $1,652,000 since Friday.

BOYNTON CLAIMS FRIENDS, BY ERROR, DEFEATED HIS BILL

Reconsideration will be asked today in the House on the vote whereby E. Moody Boynton, the veteran inventor of West Newbury, saw the bill providing that the State shall extend its credit to the amount of $5,000,000 toward the construction of the Boynton bicycle railroad, defeated by 99 to 97.

Mr. Boynton said today:

"I am assured that many of my best friends, serving their first terms, were misled as to the merits of rejecting the report. All woe wanted the Boynton bill should have voted "no," yet many pledged to vote for the Boynton bill voted "yes," with no intention of breaking their pledges."

WORKMAN TODAY RICH TOMORROW SAYS B. C. FORBES

By B. C. FORBES.

In America the workman of yesterday is the capitalist of today. And the workman of today will be the capitalist of tomorrow. Have no doubts on that score. How often do we hear: The workman nowadays hasn't a chance!" Hasn't he?

Yesterday that complaint was made to me by a young man who has been moderately successful. I challenged it. Straightway I set sticking on the subject.

Let's see now, just who is who, and who was who.

Who are these terrible capitalists anyway? Where did they come from? Were they born that way or did they raise themselves? Were they once upon a time ordinary workers like the rest of us? Did they start at scratch?

Well, let's start with the (reputedly) richest man on earth. Was John D. Rockefeller born with a golden spoon in his mouth? Was his brother, William, also enormously wealthy? No. John D. was as poor as a church mouse, and borrowed a modest sum on which to start business on his own account.

$1 a Week for Carnegie.

How about the next in line, Andrew Carnegie? He set to begin in an origine room at $1 br so a week, and have to slave like a grown-up to eke out a bender existence for his mother? No silver spoon in his mouth. Even a tin one. He was not a born one, I trow.

The greatest industry in the United States is railroading. The first railroad giant in this country was Commodore Vanderbilt. He was the world famous. He was not reared on any lap of luxury. The greatest living railroad man in America is James J. Hill. He had neither purse nor influence when he set out to fulfil the Napoleonic dream of building a railroad. He has worked like a Trojan ever since transforming wilderness into fruitful farms and making two blades of grass grow where only weeds and waste luxuriated before, thus earning for himself the enviable title, "The Grand Old Man of the Northwest." And was not Edward H. Harriman the son of a poor, underpaid minister, and did he not do his own capital making?

Call the roll of other great railroad men, dead and alive, and you will find that almost every one of them began at the very bottom. What of such notable railroad presidents as Underwood of the Erie, Elliott of Northern Pacific, Ripley of Atchison, Willard of Baltimore & Ohio, Brown of New York Central, Keating of St. Paul, Ries of the Pennsylvania, Bush of Missouri Pacific, Kruttschnitt of Southern Pacific, Finley of Southern Railway, Miller of Canada, Dale of Lackawanna and a score of others? Not one of them born great or has greatness thrust upon him. They have won it by the sweat of their brows and brains.

Poor Steel Men.

Not one of our steel magnates was born rich. Gary, the head of the steel corporation, was a none too opulent Illinois lawyer, and President Farrell won his spurs as a steel salesman. Schwabb, "the greatest steel man of them all," according to Carnegie, was once as poor as he is now rich; he owns more than half of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's $15,000,000 preferred stock on which 5 per cent. dividends are now being paid.

Theodore N. Vail, the genius who has amassed fortunedom for his intelligence as of the most wonderful telephone system in the world—several hundred times as big as others are Lilliputians, has had to start from scratch—not once but several times, before he could have been kept as busy as he.

Was not Edison as scant of cash as the proverbial inventor at the outset? John Mackay was penniless when he laid out his inherited riches. Neither was Hammond, miliard as to the mark, the discoverer of automobile wizard whose personal profits last year were in the neighborhood of ten millions of dollars, confirms declare. James B. Duke, tobacco King, made his own gigantic fortune. George R. Cortelyou, head of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, is an ex-newspaper. The president of the largest national bank in the United States, Frank A. Vanderlip, was once a financial news reporter, and was something lower before he got that job. In Chicago, Henry P. Davison, the abler head of the greatest banking firm in America, that of J. P. Morgan & Co., used to work on a farm during school vacations. He began to earn his living by selling about the age gilded youths are leaving the nurseries.

Wanamaker Errand Boy.

Turning to merchant princes did not John Wanamaker start as an errand boy in a book store. Horace B. Claflin, founder of the biggest wholesale drygoods firm in the country, and father of John Claflin, its present able head, began very humbly, Mary. Simmons, Gimbel and other names will spring to mind.

No, the race today is not to the born rich. Inherited wealth cannot keep a brainless son at the head of any huge enterprise. Only brains, burning bankroll, form the all necessary qualifications. Prepared sons of multimillionaires are more often ornaments than useful cogs in the industrial wheel. There is no room in the feverish struggle for interfering figureheads.

How To Darken Gray Hair

By A Specialist.

A very satisfactory preparation which darkens gray hair and acts as a corrective agent for dandruff and other scalp troubles, which can be made at a small expense and in your own home by dissolving a small box of Barbo Compound, 2½ ounces of water, then adding an ounce of bay rum and a quarter ounce of glycerine. Any drug store can obtain these ingredients. This is to be applied once a week until the hair is sufficiently darkened, then every two weeks to keep the hair to look and glossy and the scalp in a healthy condition. It may be used with equal success in darkening the beard. This is a preparation that gives splendid results both as a hair darkener and a remedy for all scalp disorders, and is well worthy of a trial. You will find it far superior to the costly nasty stuff preparations and much less expensive.—Advertisement.

A Pretty Little Boy—AND HIS MICROBE COLLECTOR

How Many Children Are Sent Out to Play with a Dog or a Cat That Will Get and BRING TO THE CHILD Any Disease Germ Within Reach?

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

In the elevator of a prosperous hotel the other morning you could see these three:

A governess, French, a little boy in her charge, and in charge of both of them a foolish looking little fluffy, long-haired Chinese dog, weighing about three or four pounds, its ears and its hair touching the ground. It was one of the dogs that Chinese mandarins are said to carry around in their sleeves.

The nurse carried the dog for a little while, then the little boy held it. Then it ran around on the floor.

And they went out into the street together.

The little boy was carefully washed and carefully dressed. Elaborate leggings and solid shoes protected his legs and feet. He had gloves on his hands.

The nurse took very good care of him.

The little dog ran around and collected microbes and brought them back to the small boy.

Together the three walked along the sidewalk outside of the hotel. The little dog ran to every filthy spot eagerly, and galloped back again to be welcomed by the boy, and occasionally picked up and embraced.

Wherever there was dust or dirt the small Chinese dog was busy hunting microbes, and he faithfully brought them back again TO THE CHILD, supposed to be protected.

What can be said of the intelligence of fathers, and mothers, rich enough to protect their children thoroughly, and spending part of their money to buy and give to the child a preposterous four-legged collector of microbes to make sure that any diseases within reach will be brought back and probably put in contact with the child's mucous membrane, either in the mouth or nose?

Quite probably the miserable dog was "Mamma's pet," and was sent out with the child to get an airing, with a nurse to care for both.

You can see a dog of that kind in the picture on this page. Too often, as in this picture, from "The Masses," the mother is interested in the dog, rather than in the unfortunate child.

Every mother of a little boy will pity this little boy, and despise the woman who holds the dog in her arms, and apparently has no thought of the child.

But at least the woman in the picture IS HOLDING THE DOG AND ITS MICROBES IN HER OWN ARMS, and not giving it to the child.

How many mothers and fathers realize that they hurt their children physically, as this cold-blooded mother hurts hers spiritually, when they actually give to their children microbe collectors as their daily companions?

Keep cats and dogs and germs of disease away from your children.

At Last, One of the Congressional Employes of Standard Oil Makes Abject Confession

Bailey, Foraker, Haskell and other political perverts of the Standard Oil taint have persisted in denials even to this day. They are shattered and broken men, riddled into obscurity and shame by the unanswerable fire of the Archbold letters. But they are sullen and obdurate. Their lips have not yet framed a willing confession.

It is otherwise with one man of this distressful company. Joseph Sibley—formerly legislative whip and tipster of John D. Archbold in the House of Representatives—has broken the dogged monotony of denial. He has confessed. He has thrown up his soiled hands—with the itching palms turned outward to the day.

On Saturday the Clapp Committee gave to the newspapers a letter from Joseph Sibley making formal admission of the fact that he was a member of Congress and not a private citizen at the time when he received from Mr. Archbold a certain incriminating cipher dispatch, recently reproduced in Heart's Magazine.

In his letter of confession to Senator Clapp, Mr. Sibley says he forgot that he was president of one of the subsidiary interests of the Standard Oil Company, provided with a Standard Oil cipher code, at a time when he was supposed to be serving the people as a member of Congress.

It was a strange lapse of memory! But now the fickle tide of recollection has turned back. Mr. Sibley is sure that he was both an ostensible statesman and a secret agent of the Standard Oil Company—on a certain specified date.

The confession was belated. It came only when it was certain that the Clapp Committee had under its hand the means of proving, without any help from Mr. Sibley's reviving memory or feebly uplaring conscience, that he was indeed a member of the House of the Representatives at the moment when he received the cipher dispatch in question. But Mr. Sibley should have such comfort as he can get from the clearing of his breast.

Mr. Sibley is greatly to be pitied. The Clapp Committee, his betrayed constituency, and the public at large will no doubt deal with him, not more sternly, but more gently, for his long delayed repentance.

He has broken the sullen conspiracy of silence that has linked him with Bailey, Foraker and the rest in a wide conspiracy of political treason.

Is it too much to hope that some of his unhappy companions may take heart from his examples and may decide to ease their burdened consciences while they still have mortal breath?

There are such mothers, out of place in the human race. Some "good mothers" are more foolish than this one, although not as heartless. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

How to Beat the Cost of Living and Provide for a Savings Fund

Strict Management of Family Finances Can Defy Presidential Changes and Resultant Periods of Unsettled Conditions.

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

TO make a success of himself, the average man must have these things:

1. A job.
2. A place to sleep.
3. Some clothing.
4. Food.
5. Ambition.

They are all necessary, and they all figure in the Cost of Living.

The job yields so much Income, and takes so much Time. Out of the Income the worker buys shelter, clothing and food. Out of the Time he has left over after his day's work is done he buys the possibilities of Ambition.

The Cost of Living may be high, and the way the Government runs affairs may be wrong, but the average man can do nothing in the next twenty-four hours that will materially change either of these things.

But he must begin, say, about 7 a. m., and get down to brass tacks; down to doing his day's work that he may have shelter, food and clothing of his own earning during the day and night.

And besides this, he must spend a little of his spare time in firing the engine of Ambition, in order to be able to afford tomorrow, or next year, the things that he cannot afford now.

We grumble a good deal about conditions as they are about us.

And, grumbling, we forget to cast a cold and critical eye upon conditions as they are.

The Mental Scientists tell us that by holding the proper attitude toward life, all good things will come to us.

This is true.

But there is a joker in the package. It lies in the words "proper attitude."

The whole game of life, including the Cost of Living, is up to the individual.

There is no likelihood that the Government will make us rich pensioners, however we may vote.

But there is every likelihood in the world that it will protect the man who undertakes to run a job and a lofty Ambition at one and the same time. This is life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, which are free gratis to all who have the "proper mental" attitude toward them.

II.

The value and worth of the daily paper is that it continually shows us our possibilities.

Here is a news item that reports the operations of a man who, after seventy-five years of age made over Two Hundred Thousand Dollars. He MADE it, mind you. The Government gave him nothing—except liberty to be ambitious.

Here is another that tells about a man who owes over Ten Thousand Dollars because he could not change his mode of living, even when his income fell below his expenses.

Now the Government did not get him into trouble. He probably charges his misfortune to the Cost of Living. That is right. But it was the cost he bought that wrecked him, not the cost that was forced upon him by any power except his own bad judgment.

III.

I talked with a hotel waiter a few days ago about the Cost of Living. Here is his case:

Salary per month, Twenty-eight Dollars. Tips about the same.

The hotel gives him all his meals except three per week.

He has held his job for twelve years.

He is married, and has one boy, aged nine.

Against this:

Rent, Twenty-two Dollars per month.

Habit expenses, smoking a pipe. Insurance, a Five Hundred Dollar Endowment Policy, costing Twenty-one Dollars per year.

A wife, who handles all the money and keeps a record so carefully that it balances to a penny every month.

This record shows two weak points:

Too much is paid for rent—nearly forty per cent.

An endowment policy is a mistake, because considerably more straight life Insurance could be carried for the same premium.

But this record also shows some strong points:

1. The man has kept his job continuously for twelve years.

2. He and his wife know exactly what they do with their money.

3. An examination of their record shows that the wife has put into the Savings Bank, in twelve years, a total of Four Hundred and Thirty-eight Dollars. Small amounts have occasionally been drawn out to pay unexpected expenses. They have in hand now, Three Hundred and Twelve Dollars as an emergency fund.

What does it all mean?

It means this:

By strict management, family finance can beat the Cost of Living.

It can defy changes of Presidents every four years.

It can do business on little, and still secure a savings fund.

Referring once again to news items: Some consternation is expressed in high society because there is to be a scarcity of certain expensive kinds of perfumery. A small amount that formerly cost Ninety-five Cents is to be One Dollar and Thirty-five Cents, or something like that.

This is going to raise the Cost of Living for many a struggling family, but it is safe to say that it won't hurt the affairs of the waiter.

SONG OF THE BALKANS

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

SON of a free-born mother,
I myself am free,
And I range my plains and my mountain chains
Where none shall master me.

Shall the son of a girl of Cashmiri
Dare, then, to look into my eyes?
Does the son of a slave dream that he may be brave
When his mother was never so wise?

For in fertile Albania, sweet Cashmere,
And over the far Georgian hills,
Moslem man, unafraid, barters woman in trade;
So his shadowed Zenana he fills.

In the dark were ye born, and Mohammed
Dooms your daughters to prison again.
Shall these daughters of ease, who have learned but to please—
Shall these maids be the mothers of Men?

Ye are millions, but can ye meet thousands
When we clash 'neath the war god's bold plume?
On the wide fields of Thrace it is men ye must face;
Can ye smile as ye come to such doom?

Ye have shouted your wild "Allah Akbar!"
And the nations have shuddered to hear;
But we know what ye are 'neath your Crescent and Star;
Dare ye meet both our hosts and your fear?

Son of a Balkan woman,
Body and soul are free,
For a spirit high that shall dare to die
Is my mother's gift to me.
